"adjusted selling cost" to a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "supplier") of a property is the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is

(a) where the property is purchased from another person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length, the lesser of

(i) the cost to the supplier of the property, and

(ii) the adjusted selling cost to the other person or partnership of the property, and

(b) in any other case, the cost to the supplier of the property,

and for the purpose of paragraph (b),

(c) where part of the cost to a supplier of a particular property is attributable to another property acquired by the supplier from a person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length, that part of the cost is deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the amount of that part of the cost otherwise determined, and

(ii) the adjusted selling cost to the person or the partnership of the other property,

(d) where part of the cost to a supplier of a property is attributable to a service (other than a service rendered by a person as an employee of the supplier) rendered to the supplier by a person or partnership with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length, that part of the cost is deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the amount of that part of the cost otherwise determined, and

(ii) the adjusted service cost to the person or partnership of rendering the service, and

(e) no part of the cost to a supplier of a property that is attributable to remuneration based on profits or a bonus paid or payable to an employee of the supplier shall be included, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of government assistance or non-government assistance that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the property and that the supplier has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive.

Related Provisions: 127(11.8) — Interpretation; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

"adjusted service cost" to a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "supplier") of rendering a particular service is the amount determined by the formula:

where

A is the cost to the supplier of rendering the particular service,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the cost to the supplier for a service (other than a service rendered by a person as an employee of the supplier) rendered by a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the supplier to the extent that the cost is incurred for the purpose of rendering the particular service

exceeds

(b) the adjusted service cost to the person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) of rendering the service referred to in that paragraph to the supplier,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the cost to the supplier of a property acquired by the supplier from a person or partnership that does not deal at arm's length with the supplier

exceeds

(b) the adjusted selling cost to the person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) of the property, to the extent that the excess relates to the cost of rendering the particular service,

D is the total of all amounts each of which is remuneration based on profits or a bonus paid or payable to an employee of the supplier to the extent that it is included in the cost to the supplier of rendering the particular service, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is government assistance or non-government assistance that can reasonably be considered to be in respect of rendering the particular service and that the supplier has received, is entitled to receive or can reasonably be expected to receive;

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 127(11.7) added by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 30(24), applicable to expenditures incurred in taxation years that begin after 1995.

(11.8) Interpretation for non-arm's length costs — For the purposes of this subsection and subsections (11.6) and (11.7),

(a) the cost to a person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "supplier") of rendering a service or providing a property to another person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "recipient") with which the supplier does not deal at arm's length does not include,

(i) where the cost to the recipient of the service rendered or property provided by the supplier would, but for this paragraph, be a cost to the recipient incurred in rendering a particular service or providing a particular property to a person or partnership with which the recipient does not deal at arm's length, any expenditure of the supplier to the extent that it would, if it were incurred by the recipient in rendering the particular service or providing the particular property, be excluded from a cost to the recipient because of this paragraph, and

(ii) in any other case, any expenditure of the supplier to the extent that it would, if it were incurred by the recipient, not be a qualified expenditure of the recipient;

(b) paragraph 69(1)(c) does not apply in determining the cost of a property; and

(c) the leasing of a property is deemed to be the rendering of a service.

History: Subsec. 127(11.8) added by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 30(24), applicable to expenditures incurred in taxation years that begin after 1995.

(3) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 128(3) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 152(4), applicable to bankruptcies that occur after April 26, 1995. Subsec. 128(3) formerly read:

(3) Definitions of "bankrupt" and "estate of the bankrupt" — In this section, "bankrupt" and "estate of the bankrupt" have the meanings assigned by the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act.

Changes in Residence

128.1 (1) Immigration — For the purposes of this Act, where at a particular time a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada,

(a) year-end, fiscal period — where the taxpayer is a corporation or a trust,

(i) the taxpayer's taxation year that would otherwise include the particular time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time and a new taxation year of the taxpayer shall be deemed to have begun at the particular time, and

(ii) for the purpose of determining the taxpayer's fiscal period after the particular time, the taxpayer shall be deemed not to have established a fiscal period before the particular time;

(b) deemed disposition — the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed, at the time (in this subsection referred to as the "time of disposition") that is immediately before the time that is immediately before the particular time, of each property owned by the taxpayer, other than, if the taxpayer is an individual,

(i) property that would be taxable Canadian property if the taxpayer had been resident in Canada at no time in the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before the particular time,

Proposed Amendment — 128.1(1)(b)(i)

(i) property that is a taxable Canadian property,

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 77(1), will amend subpara. 128.1(1)(b)(i) to read as above, applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Section 128.1 of the Act sets out the income tax effects of becoming or ceasing to be resident in Canada. The present amendments make several important additions to section 128.1, including:

- a more comprehensive deemed disposition of property by individual emigrants;
- greater clarity as to the exclusion of certain pension and other rights from the deemed dispositions on emigration and immigration;
- special accommodation of individuals (other than trusts) who, having emigrated from Canada, re-establish residence in Canada;
- the ability for post-emigration losses in effect to reduce gains realized as a result of the deemed disposition on emigration;
- information reporting requirements for individuals who emigrate from Canada; and
- in certain circumstances, a deemed end to the fiscal period of a business carried on by an individual emigrant.

In addition, these amendments make a number of clarifying and updating changes to section 128.1. They also revise the section as necessary to reflect other amendments such as the restructured definition "taxable Canadian property" and the changes to section 114 of the Act.

Subsection 128.1(1) of the Act sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada. Paragraph 128.1(1)(b) treats a taxpayer who becomes resident in Canada as having disposed of the taxpayer's property, with certain exceptions, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value. This disposition is deemed to have taken place immediately before the time that is immediately before the time at which the taxpayer becomes resident.

The properties excluded from the deemed disposition on immigration under paragraph 128.1(1)(b) are essentially those properties that were, ignoring any relevant tax treaty, already subject to tax in Canada. Subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(i) sets out one type of excluded property, being taxable Canadian property. Subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(i) is amended, with application after October 1, 1996, to simplify its description of taxable Canadian property. This change is a consequence of the relocation of the main definition of taxable Canadian property to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

(ii) property that is described in the inventory of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada at the time of disposition,

(iii) eligible capital property in respect of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada at the time of disposition,

(iv) property in respect of which the taxpayer elected under paragraph 48(1)(c), as it read in its application before 1993, or subparagraph (4)(b)(iv) in respect of the last preceding time the taxpayer ceased to be resident in Canada, and

(v) a right to acquire shares of the capital stock of a corporation where section 7 would apply if the taxpayer disposed of the right to a person with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length,

Proposed Amendment — 128.1(1)(b)(iv), (v)

(iv) an excluded right or interest of the taxpayer (other than an interest in a non-resident testamentary trust that was never acquired for consideration),

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 77(2), will amend subpara. 128.1(1)(b)(iv) to read as above, and repeal subpara. (v), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: As described above, paragraph 128.1(1)(b) of the Act provides for a deemed disposition of most properties owned by a taxpayer who becomes resident in Canada. Subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(iv) excludes from this deemed disposition property that was the subject of an election under existing subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv) of the Act — an election not to be treated as having disposed of the property on an earlier emigration from Canada. One of the effects of having made the election is that the property is deemed to be taxable Canadian property, which in any case is (as a result of subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(i)) excluded from the deemed disposition on immigration. The current version of subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(iv) is thus not necessary, and can be replaced with a different rule.

New subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(iv) excludes from the deemed disposition on immigration any property (other than an interest acquired for no consideration in a non-resident testamentary trust) that is an "excluded right or interest" of the taxpayer. As defined in new subsection 128.1(10) of the Act, the term "excluded right or interest" includes many kinds of income rights and other properties. Since the term also encompasses rights under agreements referred to in subsections 7(1) and 7(1.1) of the Act (options of employees to acquire shares of a corporation or units of a mutual fund trust), existing subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(v), which refers only to employee stock options, is unnecessary and is repealed.

for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition;

(c) deemed acquisition — the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired at the particular time each property deemed by paragraph (b) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property;

(c.1) deemed dividend to immigrating corporation — if the taxpayer is a particular corporation that immediately before the time of disposition owned a share of the capital stock of another corporation resident in Canada, a dividend is deemed to have been paid by the other corporation, and received by the particular corporation, immediately before the time of disposition, equal to the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the share immediately before the time of disposition exceeds the total of

(i) the paid-up capital in respect of the share immediately before the time of disposition, and

(ii) if the share immediately before the time of disposition was taxable Canadian property that is not treaty-protected property, the amount by which, at the time of disposition, the fair market value of the share exceeds its cost amount;

(c.2) deemed dividend to shareholder of immigrating corporation — if the taxpayer is a corporation and an amount has been added to the paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the corporation's capital stock because of paragraph (2)(b),

(i) the corporation is deemed to have paid, immediately before the time of disposition, a dividend on the issued shares of the class equal to the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the class, and

(ii) a dividend is deemed to have been received, immediately before the time of disposition, by each person (other than a person in respect of whom the corporation is a foreign affiliate) who held any of the issued shares of the class equal to that proportion of the dividend so deemed to have been paid that the number of shares of the class held by the person immediately before the time of disposition is of the number of issued shares of the class outstanding immediately before the time of disposition; and

(d) foreign affiliate — where the taxpayer was, immediately before the particular time, a foreign affiliate of another taxpayer that is resident in Canada,

(i) the affiliate shall be deemed to have been a controlled foreign affiliate (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the other taxpayer immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) such amount as is prescribed shall be included in the foreign accrual property income (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the affiliate for its taxation year ending immediately before the particular time.

(b) for the purposes of this Act, in computing the paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the corporation's capital stock at any time after the particular time and before the time, if any, at which the corporation next becomes resident in Canada, there shall be

(i) added the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the particular class, if that amount is positive and the corporation so elects for all such classes in respect of that acquisition of residence by notifying the Minister in writing within 90 days after the particular time, and

(ii) deducted, if the amount of the paid-up capital adjustment in respect of the particular class is negative, the absolute value of that amount.

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(4) Emigration — For the purposes of this Act, where at any particular time a taxpayer ceases to be resident in Canada,

Proposed Amendment — Foreign exploration and development expenses

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 28, 2000: (38) That, where a taxpayer ceases after February 27, 2000 to reside in Canada,

(a) the taxpayer's FEDE deduction for the taxpayer's last year of residence in Canada in respect of expenses incurred in taxation years that began before 2001 be limited to the greater of the taxpayer's foreign resource income for that year and 10 per cent of the taxpayer's FEDE balance at the end of that year, and

(b) the taxpayer be permitted for each subsequent taxation year of residence outside Canada to deduct up to 10 per cent of the taxpayer's FEDE balance at the end of that subsequent year in computing the taxpayer's taxable income earned in Canada.

[For the full text of the proposals on FEDE and the accompanying Budget Supplementary Information, see under 66(4) — ed.]

(a) year-end, fiscal period — where the taxpayer is a corporation or a trust,

(i) the taxpayer's taxation year that would otherwise include the particular time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time and a new taxation year of the taxpayer shall be deemed to have begun at the particular time, and

(ii) for the purpose of determining the taxpayer's fiscal period after the particular time, the taxpayer shall be deemed not to have established a fiscal period before the particular time;

Proposed Addition — 128.1(4)(a.1)

(a.1) fiscal period — if the taxpayer is an individual (other than a trust) and carries on a business at the particular time, otherwise than through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in Canada,

(i) the fiscal period of the business is deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time and a new fiscal period of the business is deemed to have begun at the particular time, and

(ii) for the purpose of determining the fiscal period of the business after the particular time, the taxpayer is deemed not to have established a fiscal period of the business before the particular time;

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 77(3), will add para. 128.1(4)(a.1), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsection 128.1(4) sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer ceases to be resident in Canada. New paragraph 128.1(4)(a.1) provides that the fiscal period of any business carried on by an individual emigrant (other than a trust), otherwise than through a permanent establishment in Canada, is deemed to have ended immediately before the emigration time and a new fiscal period of the business is deemed to have begun at the emigration time. This ensures the appropriate measurement of the individual's pre-departure income or loss from the business. The paragraph, which applies to changes in residence after October 1, 1996, also allows the emigrant to choose a new fiscal period of the business.

(b) deemed disposition — the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed, at the time (in this paragraph and paragraph (d) referred to as the "time of disposition") that is immediately before the time that is immediately before the particular time, of each property owned by the taxpayer, other than

(i) where the taxpayer is an individual, property that would be taxable Canadian property if the taxpayer had been resident in Canada at no time in the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before the particular time,

(ii) where the taxpayer is an individual, property that is described in the inventory of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada at the particular time,

(iii) where the taxpayer is an individual, a right to receive a payment described in any of paragraphs 212(1)(h) and (j) to (q), a right under a registered education savings plan or a right to receive any payment of a benefit under the Canada Pension Plan or a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of that Act,

(iv) where the taxpayer is an individual other than a trust, each capital property not described in any of subparagraphs (i) to (iii) in respect of which, on or before the taxpayer's balance-due day for the taxation year in which the taxpayer ceased to be resident in Canada, the taxpayer elects in prescribed manner and furnishes to the Minister security acceptable to the Minister for the payment of the additional tax that would have been payable by the taxpayer under this Part for the year had the taxpayer not so elected,

(v) where the taxpayer is an individual other than a trust and was, during the 10 years immediately preceding the particular time, resident in Canada for a period or periods totalling 60 months or less, property that was

(A) owned by the taxpayer at the time the taxpayer last became resident in Canada, or

(B) acquired by the taxpayer by inheritance or bequest after the taxpayer last became resident in Canada, and

(vi) a right to acquire shares of the capital stock of a corporation where section 7 would apply if the taxpayer disposed of the right to a person with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length, for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition, which proceeds shall be deemed to have become receivable and to have been received by the taxpayer at the time of disposition;

Proposed Amendment — 128.1(4)(b)

(b) deemed disposition — the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed, at the time (in this paragraph and paragraph (d) referred to as the "time of disposition") that is immediately before the time that is immediately before the particular time, of each property owned by the taxpayer other than, if the taxpayer is an individual,

(i) real property situated in Canada, a Canadian resource property or a timber resource property,

(ii) capital property used in, eligible capital property in respect of or property described in the inventory of, a business carried on by the taxpayer through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in Canada at the particular time,

(iii) an excluded right or interest of the taxpayer,

(iv) if the taxpayer is not a trust and was not, during the 120-month period that ends at the particular time, resident in Canada for more than 60 months, property that was owned by the taxpayer at the time the taxpayer last became resident in Canada or that was acquired by the taxpayer by inheritance or bequest after the taxpayer last became resident in Canada, and

(v) any property in respect of which the taxpayer elects under paragraph (6)(a) for the taxation year that includes the first time, after the particular time, at which the taxpayer becomes resident in Canada, for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the time of disposition, which proceeds are deemed to have become receivable and to have been received by the taxpayer at the time of disposition;

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 77(3), will amend para. 128.1(4)(b) to read as above, applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

S. 78 of the amending legislation provides:

78. (1) If an individual ceased at any time after 1992 and before October 2, 1996 to be resident in Canada and so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the sixth month following the month in which this Act is assented to, subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iii) of the Act as it read at that time shall, in respect of the cessation of residence, be read as enacted by this Act and as though subsection 128.1(10) of the Act, as enacted by this Act, applied.

(2) Where an individual makes an election under subsection (1), notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any reassessment of the individual's tax, interest or penalties for any year shall be made that is necessary to take the election into account.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) treats a taxpayer who ceases to be resident in Canada as having disposed of the taxpayer's property, for proceeds equal to fair market value. This disposition is deemed to have taken place at a "time of disposition" that is immediately before the time that is immediately before the time the taxpayer ceases to be resident. The time of cessation of residence is referred to in the provision as the "particular time" and in these notes as the "emigration time."

Where the taxpayer is an individual, certain types of property are exempted from the deemed disposition. These properties, generally, are those that would be subject to Canadian taxation in the hands of a non-resident.

Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) is amended to ensure that this policy is better reflected in the legislation. Under amended paragraph 128.1(4)(b), an individual emigrant from Canada is treated as having disposed of all property other than:

(i) real property situated in Canada, Canadian resource properties and timber resource properties;

(ii) property of a business carried on by the individual, at the emigration time, through a permanent establishment in Canada – including capital property, eligible capital property and property described in the inventory of the business;

(iii) property that is an "excluded right or interest" of the individual. As defined in new subsection 128.1(10) of the Act, the term "excluded right or interest" includes many kinds of income rights and other properties. See the commentary on new subsection 128.1(10) for more details;

(iv) certain property of short-term residents (see below); and

(v) certain property of a short-term non-resident (see the commentary on new subsection 128.1(6) of the Act).

Since the definition "excluded right or interest" in new subsection 128.1(10) encompasses rights under agreements referred to in subsections 7(1) and 7(1.1) of the Act (options of employees to acquire shares of a corporation or units of a mutual fund trust), existing subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(vi), which refers only to employee stock options, is unnecessary and is repealed.

Under new subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv), an individual (other than a trust) who has been resident in Canada for 60 months or less during the 10-year period preceding the cessation of residence is not deemed to dispose of any property that the individual owned on becoming resident in Canada, or that the individual inherited after becoming resident here. (This exception was formerly provided under subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(v) of the Act.)

Where an individual (other than a trust) ceases to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996 and re-establishes Canadian residence at a later time, a special rule, set out in new subsection 128.1(6), enables the individual to exclude all property from the deemed disposition in respect of the cessation of residence. For additional information, see the commentary on subsection 128.1(6).

Two additional points should be noted. First, where an emigrating individual owns shares of a corporation which owns a life insurance policy under which the individual's life is insured, upon the deemed disposition at departure of the individual's shares in the corporation, a special rule contained in amended subsection 70(5.3) of the Act will be used in the valuation of the corporation's shares — the cash surrender value of the life insurance policy owned by the corporation will be treated as the fair market value of that policy. Second, the Regulations will be amended after these amendments receive Royal Assent, so that the definition "permanent establishment" in section 8201 of the Regulations will apply for the purpose of subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(ii) of the Act.

Amended paragraph 128.1(4)(b) generally applies after October 1, 1996. In addition, an individual who ceased to be a Canadian resident after 1992 and before October 2, 1996 may also elect to exclude from the deemed disposition at emigration property described in the definition "excluded right or interest" in new subsection 128.1(10) of the Act. This election must be made in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue within six months of these amendments receiving Royal Assent. It should also be noted that this election will cause amended subparagraph 115(1)(a)(i) of the Act to apply. For additional information, see the commentary on subsection 115(1).

Transition

Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act treats a person who ceases to be resident in Canada as having disposed of most of the person's properties. The changes these amendments introduce to that deemed disposition apply, as a general matter, after October 1, 1996. However, certain of the changes are relieving clarifications of the scope of the deemed disposition. This provision allows a taxpayer who ceased to be resident in Canada after 1992 and before October 2, 1996 to elect that those relieving changes apply to that cessation of residence. In particular, an election under this provision will allow an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada after 1992 and before October 2, 1996 to rely on the new definition "excluded right or interest" in new subsection 128.1(10) of the Act in respect of that cessation of residence, for the purpose of the deemed disposition rules under subsection 128.1(4) of the Act.

It should be noted that such an election, which must be made in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the sixth month following Royal Assent to these amendments, will also cause certain changes to section 115 of the Act to apply. For additional information, see the commentary on section 115 and 128.1(4)(d)–(f).

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (re taxpayer migration), June 5, 2000: See under 128.1(4)(d)–(f).

(c) reacquisition — the taxpayer shall be deemed to have reacquired, at the particular time, each property deemed by paragraph (b) to have been disposed of by the taxpayer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property;

(d) individual — notwithstanding paragraphs (b) and (c), where a taxpayer who is an individual other than a trust so elects in prescribed manner, on or before the taxpayer's balance-due day for the taxation year that includes the particular time, in respect of any property described in subparagraph (b)(i) or (ii), the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of disposition for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that time, and to have reacquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to those proceeds;

(e) deemed [taxable Canadian] property — capital property in respect of which a taxpayer elects under subparagraph (b)(iv) shall be deemed to be taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer from the particular time until the earlier of

(i) the time when the taxpayer disposes of the property, and

(ii) the time when the taxpayer next becomes resident in Canada; and

(f) losses on election — where a taxpayer elects under subparagraph (b)(iv) or paragraph (d),

(i) the taxpayer's income for the taxation year that includes the particular time shall be deemed to be the greater of

(A) that income otherwise determined, and

(B) the lesser of

(I) that income determined without reference to this subsection, and

(II) that income determined without reference to subparagraph (b)(iv) and paragraph (d), and

(ii) the amount of each of the taxpayer's non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss and limited partnership loss for the taxation year that includes the particular time shall be deemed to be the lesser of

(A) that amount otherwise determined, and

(B) the greater of

(I) that amount determined without reference to this subsection, and

(II) that amount determined without reference to subparagraph (b)(iv) and paragraph (d).

Proposed Amendment — 128.1(4)(d)–(f)

(d) individual — elective disposition — notwithstanding paragraphs (b) to (c), if the taxpayer is an individual (other than a trust) and so elects in prescribed form and manner in respect of a property described in subparagraph (b)(i) or (ii),

(i) the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of disposition for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that time and to have reacquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to those proceeds,

(ii) the taxpayer's income for the taxation year that includes the particular time is deemed to be the greater of

(A) that income determined without reference to this subparagraph, and

(B) the lesser of

(I) that income determined without reference to this subsection, and

(II) that income determined without reference to subparagraph (i), and

(iii) each of the taxpayer's non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss and limited partnership loss for the taxation year that includes the particular time is deemed to be the lesser of

(A) that amount determined without reference to this subparagraph, and

(B) the greater of

(I) that amount determined without reference to this subsection, and

(II) that amount determined without reference to subparagraph (i); and

(d.1) employee CCPC stock option shares — if the taxpayer is deemed by paragraph (b) to have disposed of a share which was acquired under circumstances to which subsection 7(1.1) applied, there shall be deducted from the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition the amount that would, if section 7 were read without reference to subsection 7(1.6), be added under paragraph 53(1)(j) in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share as a consequence of the deemed disposition.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 77(4), will amend para. 128.1(4)(d) to read as above, add para. (d.1) and repeal paras. (e) and (f), applicable to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996 except for para. (d.1) which is applicable to changes in residence that occur after 1992.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) treats taxpayers that cease to be resident in Canada as having disposed of their property, subject to certain exceptions, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value. Paragraph 128.1(4)(d) allows an individual (other than a trust) to choose to treat certain of the properties that would otherwise be exempt from that deemed disposition as having been disposed of. An emigrant might make this choice if, for example, the emigrant wanted to realize a latent loss on such a property in order to offset a gain resulting from the deemed disposition.

This optional deemed disposition is retained in amended paragraph (d). In addition, the paragraph reproduces the effect of existing paragraph 128.1(4)(f), which ensures that losses realized as a result of a paragraph (d) election may only offset the increase, if any, in the taxpayer's income as a result of the deemed disposition on emigration. With this effect now provided in paragraph (d) itself, paragraph (f) is no longer necessary and is repealed.

New paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) is introduced to ensure appropriate tax consequences where an individual (other than a trust) emigrates from Canada holding shares acquired under a employee stock option granted by a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC). Under section 7 of the Act, an individual who acquires shares under an employee stock option agreement is deemed to have received an employment benefit equal to the fair market value of the shares at the time of acquisition less the price paid by the individual to acquire the shares. In the case of CCPC options, subsection 7(1.1) defers the income inclusion to the year in which the individual disposes of the shares. When this occurs, the amount of the benefit is added (by virtue of paragraph 53(1)(j)) to the adjusted cost base (ACB) of the shares, thus affecting the capital gain (or loss) determined in connection with the disposition of the shares.

New subsection 7(1.6) provides that the deemed disposition rules in subsection 128.1(4) do not apply for the purposes of section 7. Thus, in the case of shares acquired by an individual under a CCPC option, there is no income inclusion under section 7 triggered by the individual's emigration and similarly no adjustment to the ACB of the shares under paragraph 53(1)(j). However, for capital gains purposes, new paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) applies to reduce the individual's proceeds of disposition in respect of the shares by the amount that would have been added to the ACB of the shares (by virtue of paragraph 53(1)(j)) had there been a deemed disposition for the purposes of section 7. This ensures that the individual's capital gain (or loss) determined in connection with the deemed disposition on emigration takes into account the amount that will eventually be taxed under section 7.

EXAMPLE — CCPC shares acquired under employee stock option

From 1993 to 1998, Katharine was employed by a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC). Part of Katharine's compensation for 1995 was an option to buy 100 shares of the corporation at a price of $1 a share. In 1996, when the shares were worth $2 each, Katharine exercised the option. In 1999, when the shares are worth $6 each, Katharine emigrates from Canada.

Under amended paragraph 128.1(4)(b), Katharine will be treated as having disposed of the shares for proceeds of $600 (= 100 × $6 fair market value). Ordinarily, the disposition would trigger an income inclusion of $100 under section 7 (= 100 × ($2 - $1)), a corresponding addition of $100 to the ACB of the shares under paragraph 53(1)(j) (resulting in a total ACB of $200), a deduction of $25 (= .25 × $100) under paragraph 110(1)(d.1) in computing taxable income, and a taxable capital gain of $300 (= .75 × ($600 - $200).

However, as a result of new subsection 7(1.6), Katharine will not be subject to any income inclusion under section 7 in respect of the deemed disposition and, thus, there will be no addition to the ACB of the shares under paragraph 53(1)(j). Were it not for new paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1), this would result in Katharine having a taxable capital gain of $375 (= .75 ($600 - $100)) on the deemed disposition of the shares under paragraph 128.1(4)(b), and an additional income inclusion of $100 minus $25 on the actual disposition of the shares.

Paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) addresses this by deducting from the proceeds of disposition, for capital gains purposes, the $100 that paragraph 53(1)(j) would have added to the ACB of the shares if there had been an income inclusion under section 7 on emigration. As a result, Katharine will realize a taxable capital gain of $300 on the deemed disposition of the shares (and an additional income inclusion of $100 less $25 when she actually disposes of the shares).

Existing paragraph 128.1(4)(e) relates to the election, under existing subparagraph (b)(iv), to exclude from the deemed disposition on emigration a property that is not taxable Canadian property. If an emigrant uses this optional exclusion, paragraph (e) treats the property as taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer until the property is disposed of or the taxpayer returns to Canada. Since the subparagraph (b)(iv) election is no longer available, paragraph (e) is repealed.

New paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) applies to changes in residence after 1992. The other amendments described above apply to changes in residence after October 1, 1996.

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (re taxpayer emigration), October 2, 1996: Property used in carrying on business in Canada

(3) That any capital property used by a non-resident person at any time after October 1, 1996 in carrying on a business (other than an insurance business) in Canada, and that ceases at any subsequent time to be so used by that person (otherwise than by reason of the property's disposition) be deemed to have been disposed of by the person for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value at that subsequent time.

Information reporting

(4) That all individuals who cease at any time after 1995 to be Canadian residents and who own at that time property the total fair market value of which is greater than $25,000 be required to provide a report in prescribed form listing each property that they owned at that time (other than a personal-use property that has a fair market value of less than $10,000).

Deemed disposition on emigration

(5) That the deemed disposition on emigration under subsection 128.1(4) of the Act be revised, in respect of an individual who at any time after October 1, 1996 ceases to be resident in Canada, to:

(a) provide for the mandatory deemed disposition and reacquisition at fair market value of all the individual's property other than

(i) real property situated in Canada,

(ii) capital property used in, or property described in an inventory of, a business carried on by the individual through a permanent establishment in Canada immediately before that time, and

(iii) property described in subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iii), (v) or (vi) of the Act, and

(b) permit the individual to provide security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue for the payment of any tax liability arising as a result of the deemed disposition described in subparagraph (a).

Trust distributions

(6) That

(a) any property (other than property described in any of clauses (5)(a)(i) to (iii)) distributed by a trust at any time after October 1, 1996 to a non-resident beneficiary be deemed to have been disposed of by the trust at its fair market value at that time, and that the trust or the beneficiary be allowed to provide security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue for the payment of any tax arising as a result of the deemed disposition of any property that was taxable Canadian property, and

(b) any property that was taxable Canadian property of a trust and that was distributed by the trust to a beneficiary on or before October 1, 1996 be deemed, for greater certainty, to be taxable Canadian property of the beneficiary after that date.

Technical Background

Taxpayer Migration

1. Overview

This Notice of Ways and Means Motion expresses the Government's intention to recommend certain changes to the income tax rules that apply to taxpayers who enter or leave Canada. Most of these changes are rather technical in nature. The most far-reaching proposals will require a more comprehensive deemed disposition and reacquisition of an emigrant's property, and will impose new reporting requirements on individual emigrants.

The Government recognizes the significance of these proposed changes, and invites Canadians to comment on them as they proceed toward implementation.

2. The current rules

Canada is among the very few countries that impose any special tax rules on individuals who become or cease to be residents. The main purpose of these rules, which have applied since 1972, is to ensure that immigrants and emigrants are taxed in Canada on all their gains on Canadian property, and on other gains that accrued while they were resident in Canada.

Immigration

A taxpayer who becomes a resident of Canada is generally treated as having disposed of and reacquired all of the taxpayer's property at its fair market value. This ensures that Canada will tax only that part of any gain on the property that accrued after the person became resident here. Property in respect of which any gain was already subject to tax in Canada ("taxable Canadian property", or TCP) is not subject to this deemed disposition. That is because Canada's Income Tax Act subjects the full amount of such gains to tax when the property is actually disposed of.

Example

N. moved to Canada from Country A in 1985. At the time of the move, N. owned an apartment building situated in Country A, and one in Canada. Each property cost N. $75,000 (or the equivalent), and each had a fair market value in 1985 of $100,000. N. sold both buildings in 1995, for $125,000 each.

For Canadian tax purposes N. was treated as having disposed of and reacquired the building in Country A for $100,000 before becoming a resident of Canada. N.'s tax cost of the building is now $100,000. Canada will thus tax only the $18,750 taxable capital gain ($25,000 capital gain X 75%) on the building in Country A that accrued while N. was a resident of Canada. Since the Canadian building is taxable Canadian property, N. was not treated as having disposed of it in 1985. Canada will tax, in 1995, the full $37,500 taxable capital gain ($50,000 capital gain X 75%) on that building.

Emigration

A taxpayer who ceases to be resident in Canada is generally treated as having disposed of and reacquired, at fair market value, all the taxpayer's property other than taxable Canadian property, stock options, and certain pension and similar rights. Individuals (other than trusts, which are individuals for tax purposes) can also choose not to be treated as having disposed of any non-TCP, provided they give security for any tax they would otherwise have had to pay.

Example

X. moved to Country B from Canada in 1990. At the time of the move, X. owned an apartment building situated in Country B, and one in Canada. Each property cost X. $75,000 (or the equivalent), and each had a fair market value in 1990 of $100,000. X. sold both buildings in 1995, for $125,000 each.

For Canadian tax purposes X. was treated as having disposed of and reacquired the building in Country B for $100,000 before ceasing to be a resident of Canada. Canada thus taxed the $18,750 taxable capital gain ($25,000 capital gain X 75%) on the Country B building that accrued while X. was a resident of Canada. But Canada will not tax X.'s post-departure gain on that building. Since the Canadian building is taxable Canadian property, X. was not treated as having disposed of it in 1990. Canada will tax the full $37,500 taxable capital gain ($50,000 capital gain X 75%) on that building.

Special rules

Several special rules apply to particular kinds of taxpayer. A Canadian trust, for example, may distribute property to a non-resident beneficiary: the rules treat that distribution as a fair market value disposition, except where the property is taxable Canadian property. Other rules treat property that is acquired on a tax-deferred ("rollover") basis in exchange for TCP as being itself TCP.

3. What will change

The most important changes proposed in this Notice of Ways and Means Motion relate to individuals (including trusts) who emigrate from Canada. First, the class of properties treated as having been sold on emigration will be expanded. Anyone who ceases to be a resident of Canada after October 1, 1996 will be treated as having disposed of and reacquired all property (including taxable Canadian property) other than Canadian real estate, Canadian business property and the properties described in current Income Tax Act subparagraphs 128.1(4)(b)(iii) (pension and other rights), (v) (certain property of short-term residents) and (vi) (stock options). This will have the effect of determining the emigrant's tax liability in respect of any accrued capital gains. The emigrant can either pay the tax immediately, or give Revenue Canada security for paying it later (without interest charges), when the property is actually sold.

Second, all individual emigrants who own property with a total value of more than $25,000 will be required to report their property holdings to Revenue Canada. An exception will be made for any personal-use property (a defined term that includes clothing, household goods, cars, etc.) with a value of less than $10,000. This reporting requirement will apply to all individuals who have left Canada after 1995, and will take the form of a schedule or similar document to be included with those persons' income tax returns for the year they left Canada.

Other changes include:

- Extending to 5 years the period for determining whether certain shares and partnership and trusts interests are taxable Canadian property. This will make it more difficult for non-resident taxpayers to manipulate the status of a share or interest by changing the investment mix of the corporation, partnership or trust.
- Deeming a disposition and reacquisition at fair market value of any capital property (such as shares or bonds held on capital account) that ceases to be used by a non-resident person in carrying on a business in Canada. This will reduce the opportunity for non-residents to avoid Canadian tax by changing the use of a property to benefit from tax-treaty protection.
- Deeming a disposition at fair market value of all property (other than Canadian real estate) distributed by a trust to a non-resident beneficiary (with the trust and beneficiary being provided the right to provide security for the tax otherwise payable), and clarifying that taxable Canadian property distributed by a trust remains taxable Canadian property to the beneficiary.
- Clarifying that property may be taxable Canadian property not only to non-residents, but also to residents of Canada. This will ensure that a number of aspects of the migration rules work as intended.

4. Next steps

The Government invites comment on these proposals. Comments may be directed to the Minister of Finance.

Questions and Answers on Proposed Changes

Background

Q. What events led up to the changes being announced today?

A. The Auditor-General raised certain concerns about a 1991 tax ruling [see ATR-70 — ed.] that allowed a taxpayer to transfer property out of Canada without being subject to immediate capital gains tax in Canada. The Finance Committee examined the issue and found that Revenue Canada's interpretation of the law as it stood in 1991 was legally correct in the context of a system that taxed emigrating Canadians on their property gains only when they ultimately sold the property.

The Committee noted, however, that Canada's right to impose tax on former Canadian residents was sometimes limited under the terms of its tax treaties with other countries. It thus recommended that the system be changed to ensure that Canadian tax be assessed at the point when property is transferred to persons living outside of Canada, or when the individual or trust owning the property leaves the country. These changes implement this recommendation.

Structure of previous system

Q. How did the system work that was in effect before today?

A. The previous system provided that gains on property owned by individuals or trusts when they moved from Canada were either taxable in Canada or, if a tax treaty applied, in their new country of residence, when the property was ultimately sold. Similar rules applied to trust distributions to foreign beneficiaries: either the trust would pay tax when the property was distributed, or the beneficiaries would be liable to tax in Canada or in their country of residence.

Effect on trusts

Q. Will the proposed changes affect transactions like that highlighted in the Auditor General's report?

A. Yes. These changes will ensure that gains on property held in a trust are subject to Canadian tax when the trust moves, or the property is distributed to people who live outside Canada.

The transaction described in the Auditor General's report involved the distribution of Canadian property by a trust to a beneficiary that lived in another country. If that transaction were to take place today, any gains accruing on the property while it was owned by the trust would be subject to Canadian tax — with the tax being payable either on distribution or, where security is provided, when the property is sold by the beneficiary.

Family trusts

Q. Does this eliminate the tax advantages associated with family trusts?

A. This issue is not specifically about family trusts. Any remaining tax advantages that family trusts may have had were eliminated by the changes announced in the 1995 budget.

The changes being made today concern all taxpayers who move out of Canada or who, in the case of trusts, distribute property to persons living outside of Canada. In effect, the changes ensure that gains arising while living in Canada will ultimately be subject to Canadian tax, and they apply equally to individuals and trusts. (Corporations are already taxable on such gains when they leave Canada, and this rule is to be maintained.)

Timing of announcement

Q. Should these changes have been announced before today?

A. The government has acted as soon as it was reasonable to do so. In May of this year the Auditor-General identified a concern with the tax system. The government immediately referred the issue to the Finance Committee, which examined the issue and issued its report two weeks ago. The government is now proposing to implement the Committee's recommendations, with effect as of today.

Retroactivity

Q. Why isn't the government giving these changes retroactive effect?

A. It would be inappropriate and unfair to tell taxpayers that their past actions will now be retroactively taxed under a set of rules that they couldn't have known about before today. The changes announced today reflect a new policy — one that taxpayers will have to take into account in their future affairs.

Consultation

Q. Will there be an opportunity for taxpayers to comment on the proposed changes before they are implemented?

A. The changes are reasonable and responsive to the concerns that the Auditor-General and the Finance Committee raised but, as is the case with all income tax proposals, taxpayers' comments on the effect of these changes are invited and will be taken into account in developing the implementing legislation.

Effect of proposed changes

Q. What do these changes do?

A. Most significantly, the changes will treat individuals and trusts who leave Canada as having realized any gains accrued on their property up to that point in time. They will have the option of paying the tax on those gains when they file their tax return for the year they leave Canada or, by providing security to Revenue Canada, can defer their payment until the property is sold.

In other words, the proposed changes ensure that all emigrants from Canada — including trusts — will pay Canadian tax on any capital gains that have accrued in Canada up to the time of departure. They also apply to ensure that trust distributions to foreign beneficiaries will be subject to Canadian tax. In both cases, the Canadian tax can be paid immediately, or security can be provided to Revenue Canada to pay the tax, without interest charges, when the property is actually sold.

The proposals also include several technical changes:

- to tighten the rules for taxing non-residents of Canada on gains they realize from the sale of interests in partnerships and trusts which have significant interests in Canadian property;
- to ensure that Canadian tax is payable with respect to gains from property used by non-residents in carrying on business in Canada;
- to confirm that the term "taxable Canadian property" applies to Canadian residents as well as non-residents, thus ensuring that a resident planning to leave Canada can't limit the gains which are taxable in Canada by exchanging TCP for non-TCP before he leaves;
- to clarify that Canadian tax with respect to gains on trust property distributed to non-resident beneficiaries before today will (subject to Canada's tax treaties) be taxed in the beneficiaries' hands if the trust wasn't liable to tax itself; and
- to require all individuals and trusts leaving Canada to file an information return reporting all of the significant assets they hold at the point of departure.

Compliance concerns

Q. What new obligations will this place on taxpayers?

A. To minimize any immediate tax burden that these changes might otherwise create, the emigrant will be able to pay the tax when the property is actually sold, provided the emigrant gives Revenue Canada security for that later payment. No interest will be charged on the tax liability during this period.

The changes will also require departing Canadians to file an information return listing all of their significant assets. This return, which in the case of individuals is required to be filed by April 30 of the year following the year of departure, will not be required for taxpayers having property with a total value of less than $25,000.

Department of Finance press release, October 2, 1996: Taxpayer Migration Rules to be Tightened

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced major changes to the income tax rules for people who leave Canada. These changes will ensure that taxpayers who move or transfer property from Canada will remain subject to Canadian tax on their gains from such property.

"Canada already has one of the strictest systems in the world when it comes to taxpayer migration," the Minister said. "This will make our system even better."

The Minister noted that the Auditor General had raised the issue of Canada's taxpayer migration rules in his report earlier this year, and that the House of Commons Finance Committee recently made several recommendations for improving Canada's tax system in this regard. Today's changes follow the recommendations of the Committee majority.

"From now on, all emigrants — including trusts — will be subject to Canadian tax on any gains that have accrued up to the time of departure, other than on Canadian real estate and a limited group of other assets — which Canada always retains the right to tax," Mr. Martin explained. "The only people this will not apply to are people who have been in Canada only temporarily."

Until now, emigrants have not been taxed on gains on certain Canadian property at the time they leave. Instead, either Canada or (where a tax treaty applies) their new country taxes those gains when they actually dispose of the property.

People who leave Canada under the new rules will calculate their tax as though they had disposed of all their property other than Canadian real estate and certain other assets. They can either pay the tax immediately or give Revenue Canada security for paying it at a later date.

In addition, today's changes implement the technical recommendations put forward by the Committee, including those regarding trusts that distribute property to non-residents.

A copy of the Notice of Ways and Means Motion tabled by the Minister today, accompanied by the Minister's remarks on tabling, is attached. A technical background note and a series of questions and answers relating to the changes are also attached.

Proposed Addition — 128.1(5)–(9)

(5) Instalment interest — If an individual is deemed by subsection (4) to have disposed of a property in a taxation year, in applying sections 155 and 156 and subsections 156.1(1) to (3) and 161(2), (4) and (4.01) and any regulations made for the purposes of those provisions, the individual's total taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year are deemed to be the lesser of

(a) the individual's total taxes payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year, determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the year, and

(b) the amount that would be determined under paragraph (a) if subsection (4) did not apply to the individual for the year.

Technical Notes: Sections 155 and 156 of the Act set out rules for computing the instalment obligations of individuals for a taxation year. Subsections 161(2), (4) and (4.01) of the Act set out rules for computing the interest payable by taxpayers on any deficiency in instalments made during a taxation year.

New subsection 128.1(5) of the Act provides a special rule for computing the instalment and instalment interest obligation of an individual for a taxation year in which the individual ceases to be a resident of Canada. This subsection applies to exclude, in computing an individual's liability for instalments for the year, the tax attributable to any deemed disposition under paragraph 128.1(4)(b), where that paragraph has the effect of increasing the individual's total tax payable under Parts I and I.1 of the Act for the year.

New subsection 128.1(5) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

(6) Returning former resident — If an individual (other than a trust) becomes resident in Canada at a particular time in a taxation year and the last time (in this subsection referred to as the "emigration time"), before the particular time, at which the individual ceased to be resident in Canada was after October 1, 1996,

(a) subject to paragraph (b), if the individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, paragraphs (4)(b) and (c) do not apply to the individual's cessation of residence at the emigration time in respect of all properties that were taxable Canadian properties of the individual throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time;

(b) where, if a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (a) is made had been acquired by the individual at the emigration time at a cost equal to its fair market value at the emigration time and had been disposed of by the individual immediately before the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would,

but for subsection 40(3.7) and this subsection, be the individual's loss from the disposition,

(i) the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)) in respect of the emigration time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of

(A) the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before the time of disposition, and

(B) the amount, if any, by which that reduction exceeds the lesser of

(I) the adjusted cost base to the individual of the property immediately before the time of disposition, and

(II) the amount, if any, which the individual specifies for the purposes of this paragraph in the election under paragraph (a) in respect of the property,

(ii) the individual is deemed to have reacquired the property at the emigration time at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under clause (i)(A) exceeds the lesser of that reduction and the amount specified by the individual under subclause (i)(B)(II), and

(iii) for the purposes of section 119, the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the particular time;

(c) if the individual so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period that began at the emigration time and that ends at the particular time and that is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have been disposed of because the individual became resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs (1)(c) and (4)(b) the individual's proceeds of disposition at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)), and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time, are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost, determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

(i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the individual's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph (4)(b) to have occurred,

(ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount that the individual specifies for the purposes of this paragraph in the election; and

(d) notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), any assessment of tax that is payable under this Act by the individual for any taxation year that is before the year that includes the particular time and that is not before the year that includes the emigration time shall be made that is necessary to take an election under this subsection into account, except that no such assessment shall affect the computation of

(i) interest payable under this Act to or by a taxpayer in respect of any period that is before the day on which the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year that includes the particular time is filed, or

(ii) any penalty payable under this Act.

Technical Notes: New subsection 128.1(6) of the Act provides special rules that apply to an individual (other than a trust) who ceases to be resident in Canada at any time after October 1, 1996 (the "emigration time") and re-establishes Canadian residence at any particular time after that time. These rules allow the individual in effect to unwind the application of paragraphs 128.1(4)(b) and (c) to properties that were owned by the individual throughout the period beginning at the emigration time and ending at the particular time.

In broad terms, new subsection 128.1(6) means that an emigrant who returns to Canada at any time after emigration will no longer be treated as having realized accrued gains on departure. Four points should be noted about these rules. First, because there is no certain way of knowing which emigrants will return to Canada, this rule does not directly affect the obligations that arise on emigration. Rather, the rule does allow the returning individual retrospectively to modify the obligations. As a practical matter, it is expected that most individuals who plan to return to Canada will use the security provisions of subsection 220(4.5) to defer payment of any tax arising as a result of emigration. In that case, the main effect of new subsection 128.1(6) will be to allow the security to be given back intact to the returning emigrant.

Second, these rules do not affect any interest or penalties owing by an individual, including interest and penalties levied on taxes in respect of the individual's emigration, calculated without reference to the rule.

Third, these rules include features designed to prevent surplus-stripping. Without these features, a resident of Canada could use a temporary period of non-residence to extract, as dividends subject only to low-rate withholding tax, value that represents accrued gains.

Fourth, the rules require separate elections in respect of taxable Canadian property (paragraph (a)) and other property (paragraph (c)). The effects of the elections differ: the paragraph (a) election removes taxable Canadian properties from the deemed disposition and reacquisition on emigration, subject to special rules in paragraph (b); while the paragraph (c) election adjusts the emigration proceeds of disposition and the returning adjusted cost base of the other properties. Each election covers all property of the given sort, but the returning individual may choose to make one election and not the other.

Paragraph 128.1(6)(a) allows the individual to make an election in respect of property that was taxable Canadian property at the emigration time and throughout the period that the individual was non-resident. The effect of making this election is that paragraphs 128.1(4)(b) and (c) do not apply in respect of all such properties of the individual for the taxation year that includes the emigration time.

Where an individual has made an election under paragraph 128.1(6)(a), paragraph 128.1(6)(b) provides special surplus-stripping rules in respect of the property covered by the election. The basic purpose of paragraph (b) is to ensure that gains that accrued before emigration from Canada, and that have been extracted in the form of dividends during the individual's residence abroad, are subject to Canadian tax as gains.

Paragraph 128.1(6)(b) applies, in respect of a paragraph (a) taxable Canadian property, where two conditions are met:

— a loss has accrued on the property during the individual's period of non-residence — that is, the property's fair market value immediately before the individual becomes resident is less than its fair market value when the individual left Canada; and — if the individual had acquired the property for its fair market value on emigration, and disposed of the property immediately before becoming resident, new subsection 40(3.7) (which applies to current and former non-resident individuals a version of the stop-loss rules in section 112 of the Act) would reduce the loss.

Where these conditions are met, paragraph (b) has four related effects. First, it treats the individual as having disposed of the property immediately before emigration, notwithstanding the paragraph (a) election. Second, it establishes the individual's proceeds of disposition of the property at that time, as the total of:

(A) the adjusted cost base of the property on emigration; and

(B) the amount, if any, by which the notional loss reduction under subsection 40(3.7) exceeds the lesser of (I) the adjusted cost base on emigration, and (II) an amount chosen by the individual.

Third, paragraph 128.1(6)(b) treats the individual as having reacquired the property on emigration, at a cost equal to the excess, if any, of the property's adjusted cost base on emigration (the (A) and (B)(I) amount above) over the lesser of the notional loss reduction under subsection 40(3.7) and the amount chosen by the individual in (B)(II) above.

The practical result of the second and third effects is that the income (in this case, dividends) that gives rise to the notional subsection 40(3.7) loss reduction is recharacterized as gains. Those gains are, subject to election, distributed between the post-return period and the deemed disposition on emigration.

Fourth, paragraph 128.1(6)(b) treats the individual, for the purposes of new section 119 of the Act, as having disposed of the property immediately before returning to Canada. This ensures that appropriate credit is given for any tax withheld under Part XIII of the Act on the income that triggered the application of paragraph 128.1(6)(b).

EXAMPLE — 128.1(6)(b)

Marie emigrates from Canada in 1999. Marie is the majority shareholder of a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) when she leaves Canada. The shares, which are taxable Canadian property to Marie, have a fair market value (FMV) at that time of $50,000 and an adjusted cost base (ACB) of $15,000, for a latent gain of $35,000. Marie receives $35,000 of dividends from the CCPC in 2000. In 2001, Marie returns to Canada. At that time, the shares have a FMV of $15,000. Marie uses the election in subsection 128.1(6) to minimize the tax consequences of her earlier emigration from Canada.

If Marie actually disposed of the shares immediately before re-establishing Canadian residence, subsection 40(3.7) of the Act would reduce her loss. Therefore, paragraph 128.1(6)(b) applies in respect of the shares.

Under paragraph 128.1(6)(b), Marie is treated as having disposed of and reacquired the shares on emigration. Assuming she elects $10,000, Marie's emigration proceeds of disposition are deemed to be $40,000, being the emigration ACB ($15,000) plus the difference between the subsection 40(3.7) reduction ($35,000) and the ACB/specified amount ($10,000). Marie thus realizes a $25,000 capital gain in the emigration year.

Marie's reacquisition cost is deemed to be $5,000, being the original ACB ($15,000) minus the lesser of the subsection 40(3.7) reduction ($35,000) and the specified amount ($10,000). Since the shares have a FMV of $15,000, Marie will eventually realize a gain of $10,000 (subject to other adjustments to ACB and FMV).

The result is that Marie's $25,000 gain on departure and remaining $10,000 latent gain equal the $35,000 she extracted in the form of dividends. The full $35,000 will thus be realized as capital gains, and section 119 will give Marie credit for any withholding tax she paid on the dividends.

Marie could have altered the timing of her capital gains on the shares. For example, if she had elected an amount of $5,000 under paragraph (a) in respect of the property, Marie's emigration proceeds of disposition would have been $45,000 ($15,000 ACB + ($35,000 40(3.7) reduction - $5,000 elected amount)), giving an emigration gain of $30,000. This would have been balanced by an increase in Marie's reacquisition cost from $5,000 to $10,000, which in turn would reduce the eventual gain Marie will realize on the shares.

New paragraph 128.1(6)(c) allows the returning individual to make an election, in respect of each property the individual owned at the emigration time and throughout the non-resident period that is subject to a deemed acquisition on immigration, under paragraph 128.1(1)(c) of the Act. In general, this describes property other than taxable Canadian property. The election adjusts, on a property-by-property basis, both the proceeds of disposition that were deemed to arise as a consequence of the deemed disposition in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) on the individual's earlier emigration, and the deemed acquisition cost under paragraph 128.1(1)(c).

Specifically, each of these amounts is adjusted by subtracting the least of:

- the amount that would otherwise be the individual's gain on the property as a result of the deemed disposition in paragraph 128.1(4)(b),
- the fair market value of the property immediately before the individual becomes resident in Canada, and
- any other amount specified by the individual.

As a result of these adjustments, the returning individual can generally defer Canadian tax on gains that had accrued before emigration, while still protecting from Canadian tax gains that accrued during periods of non-residence.

EXAMPLE — 128.1(6)(c)

Noah emigrates from Canada in 1999. Noah owns shares of a foreign corporation. When Noah leaves, the shares have a fair market value of $25,000 and an adjusted cost base of $15,000, for an accrued gain of $10,000. In 2012, Noah returns to Canada. At that time the shares have a fair market value of $80,000. Noah chooses to take advantage of the election in paragraph 128.1(6)(c) to control the tax consequences of ceasing to be a Canadian resident. Because he had a capital loss in 1999 of $7,000 from another source, Noah is content to realize a $7,000 capital gain on emigration, but he does not want to realize the other $3,000 accrued gain. Noah therefore chooses an elected amount of $3,000.

Noah's proceeds of disposition under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) are deemed to be $22,000, being the proceeds of disposition that would otherwise be determined under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) ($25,000) minus the least of:

- the amount that would have been Noah's gain on the shares under 128.1(4)(b) had this paragraph not applied ($10,000);
- the fair market value of the property at the particular time ($80,000); and
- the elected amount specified ($3,000).

Noah thus reduces his emigration-year gain to $7,000. The same $3,000 that reduces Noah's emigration proceeds is also subtracted from his reacquisition cost under paragraph 128.1(1)(c) ($80,000), leaving his new adjusted cost base in respect of the property $77,000. The property thus has a latent gain of $3,000 at the time Noah re-establishes Canadian residence in 2012.

Noah could have deferred tax on the full $10,000 gain that accrued before emigration, by increasing his elected amount in respect of the shares to $10,000.

New subsection 128.1(6) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996. The subsection provides that, notwithstanding the Act's ordinary rules governing assessments, any necessary assessments of tax will be made in order to take account of the effect of this new subsection.

A special transitional rule accommodates individuals who cease to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996 and before these amendments receive Royal Assent, and who wish to make elections under new subsection 128.1(6). The elections for these transition period emigrants will be considered to have been made in a timely manner if they are made on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the day on which Royal Assent is received.

In addition, the Regulations will be amended to ensure that the Minister of National Revenue has discretion under the "fairness package" to allow elections under new subsection 128.1(6) to be late-filed. For additional information, see the commentary in the Appendix.

Related Provisions: 40(3.7) — Stop-loss rule applicable while non-resident; 128.1(7) — Returning trust beneficiary; 128.3 — Shares acquired on rollover deemed to be same shares for 128.1(6); 161(7)(a)(xi), 164(5)(h.02), 164(5.1) — Effect of carryback of loss; 220(3.2) — Late filing of elections under (6)(a) and (c); 220(4.5)-(4.54) — Deferral of payment of tax on emigration.

Regulations: 600(c) (late filing of elections under (6)(a) and (c)).

(7) Returning trust beneficiary — If an individual (other than a trust)

(a) becomes resident in Canada at a particular time in a taxation year,

(b) owns at the particular time a property that the individual last acquired on a trust distribution to which subsection 107(2) would, but for subsection 107(5), have applied and at a time (in this subsection referred to as the "distribution time") that was after October 1, 1996 and before the particular time, and

(c) was a beneficiary of the trust at the last time, after October 1, 1996 and before the particular time, at which the individual ceased to be resident in Canada,

the following rules apply:

(d) subject to paragraphs (e) and (f), if the individual and the trust jointly so elect in writing and file the election with the Minister on or before the earlier of their filing-due dates for their taxation years that include the particular time, subsection 107(2.1) does not apply to the distribution in respect of all properties acquired by the individual on the distribution that were taxable Canadian properties of the individual throughout the period that began at the distribution time and that ends at the particular time;

(e) paragraph (f) applies in respect of the individual, the trust and a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (d) is made where, if the individual

(i) had been resident in Canada at the distribution time,

(ii) had acquired the property at the distribution time at a cost equal to its fair market value at that time,

(iii) had ceased to be resident in Canada immediately after the distribution time, and

(iv) had, immediately before the particular time, disposed of the property for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would, but for that subsection and this subsection, have been the individual's loss from the disposition;

(f) where this paragraph applies in respect of an individual, a trust and a property,

(i) notwithstanding paragraph 107(2.1)(a), the trust is deemed to have disposed of the property at the distribution time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of

(A) the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the distribution time, and

(B) the amount, if any, by which the reduction under subsection 40(3.7) described in paragraph (e) exceeds the lesser of

(I) the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the distribution time, and

(II) the amount, if any, which the individual and the trust jointly specify for the purposes of this paragraph in the election under paragraph (d) in respect of the property, and

(ii) notwithstanding paragraph 107(2.1)(b), the individual is deemed to have acquired the property at the distribution time at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount otherwise determined under paragraph 107(2)(b) exceeds the lesser of the reduction under subsection 40(3.7) described in paragraph (e) and the amount specified under subclause (i)(B)(II);

(g) if the individual and the trust jointly so elect in writing and file the election with the Minister on or before the later of their filing-due dates for their taxation years that include the particular time, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period that began at the distribution time and that ends at the particular time and that is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have been disposed of because the individual became resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs 107(2.1)(a) and (b), the trust's proceeds of disposition under paragraph 107(2.1)(a) at the distribution time, and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time, are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

(i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the trust's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph 107(2.1)(a) to have occurred,

(ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount that the individual and the trust jointly specify for the purposes of this paragraph in the election;

(h) if the trust ceases to exist before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's taxation year that includes the particular time,

(i) an election or specification described in this subsection may be made by the individual alone in writing if the election is filed with the Minister on or before that filing-due date, and

(ii) if the individual alone makes such an election or specification, the individual and the trust are jointly and severally liable for any amount payable under this Act by the trust as a result of the election or specification; and

(i) notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessment of tax payable under the Act by the trust or the individual for any year that is before the year that includes the particular time and that is not

before the year that includes the distribution time shall be made as is necessary to take an election under this subsection into account, except that no such assessment shall affect the computation of

(i) interest payable under this Act to or by the trust or the individual in respect of any period that is before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular time, or

(ii) any penalty payable under this Act.

Technical Notes: New subsection 128.1(7) of the Act provides special rules, which parallel new subsection 128.1(6) of the Act, applicable to an individual trust beneficiary (other than one that is itself a trust) who emigrates from Canada, receives distributions of trust property as a non-resident, and then re-establishes residence in Canada while still owning the property. In general terms, these rules allow the beneficiary and the trust to jointly elect, upon the beneficiary's return to Canada, to unwind the tax consequences to the trust that occurred when it distributed the property to the non-resident beneficiary.

A number of conditions must be met for the application of these rules: the individual must have been a resident of Canada and then ceased to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996; the individual must have been a beneficiary of the trust at the time he or she ceased to be resident in Canada; the distribution must occur after October 1, 1996 and before the individual re-establishes residence in Canada; the distribution must be such that subsection 107(2) of the Act would have applied but for subsection 107(5); and the individual must re-establish residence in Canada after October 1, 1996 while still owning the property distributed by the trust.

Where these conditions are met, paragraph (d) provides an election for taxable Canadian property similar to the election provided in paragraph 128.1(6)(a). Paragraphs (e) and (f) provide anti-stripping rules similar to those provided by paragraph 128.1(6)(b). Paragraph (g) provides an election for property other than taxable Canadian property, similar to the election provided in paragraph 128.1(6)(c).

Paragraph (h) provides a special rule applicable if the trust ceases to exist before the individual's filing-due date for his or her taxation year during which he or she re-establishes residence in Canada. In such cases, the elections or specifications provided in new subsection 128.1(7) can be made by the individual alone. However, the individual and the trust will then be jointly and severally liable for any amount payable under the Act by the trust as a result of the election or specification.

Paragraph (i) allows any assessment of tax to be made that is necessary for the elections under new subsection 128.1(7) to be taken into account, but provides that no such assessment shall affect the computation of interest or penalties payable.

New subsection 128.1(7) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996. A special transitional rule accommodates individuals who cease to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996 and before these amendments receive Royal Assent, and who wish to make elections under new subsection 128.1(7). The elections for these transition period emigrants will be considered to have been made in a timely manner if they are made on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the day on which Royal Assent is received.

In addition, it is proposed that the Regulations be amended to ensure that the Minister of National Revenue has discretion under the "fairness package" to allow elections under new subsection 128.1(7) to be late-filed.

Related Provisions: 40(3.7) — Stop-loss rule applicable while non-resident; 128.1(6) — Returning former resident; 128.3 — Shares acquired on rollover deemed to be same shares for 128.1(7); 161(7)(a)(xi), 164(5)(b.02), 164(5.1) — Effect of carryback of loss; 220(3.2) — Late filing of elections under (7)(d) and (g); 220(4.5)-(4.54) — Deferral of payment of tax on emigration.

Regulations: 600(c) (late filed elections under (7)(d), (g)).

(8) Post-emigration loss — If an individual (other than a trust)

(a) was deemed by paragraph (4)(b) to have disposed of a capital property at any particular time after October 1, 1996,

(b) has disposed of the property at a later time at which the property was a taxable Canadian property of the individual, and

(c) so elects in writing in the individual's return of income for the taxation year that includes the later time, there shall, except for the purpose of paragraph (4)(c), be deducted from the individual's proceeds of disposition of the property at the particular time, and added to the individual's proceeds of disposition of the property at the later time, an amount equal to the least of

(d) the amount specified in respect of the property in the election,

(e) the amount that would, but for the election, be the individual's gain from the disposition of the property at the particular time, and

(f) the amount that would be the individual's loss from the disposition of the property at the later time, if the loss were determined having reference to every other provision of this Act including, for greater certainty, subsection 40(3.7) and section 112, but without reference to the election.

Technical Notes: New subsection 128.1(8) of the Act provides relief to an individual (other than a trust) who disposes of a taxable Canadian property, after having emigrated from Canada, for proceeds that are less than the deemed proceeds that arose under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) in respect of the property when the individual emigrated.

Under subsection 128.1(8) the individual may elect to reduce the proceeds of disposition that were deemed to arise under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) in respect of a property by the least of:

- an amount specified by the individual;
- the amount that would be the individual's gain from the deemed disposition of the property under paragraph 128.1(4)(b), but for this subsection; and
- the amount that would be the individual's loss from the disposition of the property at the time the property is actually disposed of, if the loss were determined with reference to every other provision in the Act (including the stop-loss rules in subsection 40(3.7) and section 112 of the Act) but this subsection.

The same amount is added to the individual's proceeds of disposition realized at the time of actual disposition.

EXAMPLE — 128.1(8)

Odile emigrates from Canada in 1999, owning a capital interest in a trust resident in Canada that she purchased in 1997. The interest has a fair market value at the emigration time of $150,000 and an adjusted cost base of $40,000, for a latent gain of $110,000 on departure. Odile's tax is assessed on that basis, and she posts security for the tax.

In 2001, Odile sells her trust interest for $60,000. Since Odile has realized a smaller gain than assumed in her tax assessment on emigration, she elects under subsection 128.1(8) to reduce the gain she was deemed to have realized when she emigrated.

To obtain the maximum benefit from the subsection, Odile specifies an amount of $90,000 in respect of the election. Her proceeds of disposition at the emigration time are deemed to be $60,000, being the proceeds of disposition that would otherwise be determined under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) ($150,000) minus the least of:

- the amount specified ($90,000);

- the amount that would have been her taxable gain in respect of the trust interest under 128.1(4)(b) had this paragraph not applied ($110,000); and
- the amount that would have been her loss on actual disposition of the trust interest had this paragraph not applied ($150,000 - $60,000 = $90,000).

The same $90,000 amount is added to Odile's proceeds of the actual disposition of the trust interest. The result is that, in respect of the trust interest, Odile is treated as having realized a $20,000 gain in 1999, and no gain or loss on the actual disposition of the property in 2001.

It should be noted that the election in subsection 128.1(8) does not affect any interest or penalties owing by the individual at the time of making the election, including interest and penalties levied on taxes in respect of the property, calculated without reference to the subsection.

A consequential amendment to subsection 152(6) of the Act ensures that any necessary assessments of tax will be made in order to take account of the effect of new subsection 128.1(8).

New subsection 128.1(8) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996. A special transitional rule accommodates individuals who cease to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996 and before these amendments receive Royal Assent, and who wish to make the election under new subsection 128.1(8). The election for these transition period emigrants will be considered to have been made in a timely manner if it is made on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the day on which Royal Assent is received.

In addition, the Regulations will be amended to ensure that the Minister of National Revenue has discretion under the "fairness package" to allow an election under new subsection 128.1(8) to be late-filed.

Related Provisions: 128.3 — Shares acquired on rollover deemed to be same shares for 128.1(7); 152(6)(f.2) — Minister required to reassess past year to allow unused foreign tax credit; 164(7)(a)(xi), 164(5)(b.02), 164(5.1) — Effect of carryback of loss; 220(3.2) — Late filing of election under (8)(c).

Regulations: 600(c) (late filed elections under (8)(c)).

(9) Information reporting — An individual who ceases at a particular time in a taxation year to be resident in Canada, and who owns immediately after the particular time one or more reportable properties the total fair market value of which at the particular time is greater than $25,000, shall file with the Minister in prescribed form, on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year, a list of all the reportable properties that the individual owned immediately after the particular time.

Technical Notes: New subsection 128.1(9) of the Act requires an individual who ceases to be resident in Canada after 1995 to file with the Minister of National Revenue, in prescribed form, a list of all the reportable properties that the individual owned at emigration time. This reporting requirement does not apply where the total fair market value of the individual's reportable properties at emigration time is $25,000 or less. However, where an individual owns reportable properties at emigration time with a total fair market value greater than $25,000, the individual must disclose all reportable properties on the information reporting form.

The term "reportable property" is defined in new subsection 128.1(10). For additional information, see the commentary on that subsection.

New subsection 128.1(9) applies to changes in residence that occur after 1995. The information reporting form must be filed on or before the individual's filing-due date for the year of emigration from Canada. However, a special transitional rule accommodates individuals who cease to be resident in Canada after 1995 and before these amendments receive Royal Assent – a form filed by these transition period emigrants will be considered to have been filed in a timely manner if it is filed on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the day on which Royal Assent for these amendments is received.

Related Provisions: 128.1(10)"reportable property" — Exclusions.

(10) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section.

to the extent that the benefit can reasonably be considered to be attributable to services rendered by the individual in Canada;

(c) a right of the individual under an agreement referred to in subsection 7(1) or (1.1);

(d) a right of the individual to a retiring allowance,

(h) a right of the individual to a benefit described in any of subparagraphs 56(1)(a)(iii) to (vi);

(i) a right of the individual to a payment out of a NISA Fund No. 2;

(j) an interest of the individual in a personal trust resident in Canada if the interest was never acquired for consideration and did not arise as a consequence of a qualifying disposition by the individual (within the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 107.4(1) if that subsection were read without reference to paragraphs 107.4(1)(h) and (i));

(k) an interest of the individual in a non-resident testamentary trust if the interest was never acquired for consideration; or

(l) an interest of the individual in a life insurance policy in Canada, except for that part of the policy in respect of which the individual is deemed by paragraph 138.1(1)(e) to have an interest in a related segregated fund trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 128.1(10) of the Act contains two new definitions that are used in section 128.1: "excluded right or interest" and "reportable property".

In general terms, an individual's excluded rights or interests include rights of the individual to future benefits or other payments under certain plans or arrangements, many of which are employer-sponsored or legislated in nature. It also includes interests of the individual in certain trusts and insurance contracts. The definition "excluded right or interest" is relevant for three main purposes.

First, the definition is relevant for paragraphs 128.1(1)(b) and (4)(b) of the Act, which treat individuals as having disposed of (and to have immediately reacquired) most of their property on immigrating to or emigrating from Canada. With one exception that applies with regard to individuals immigrating to Canada (see subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(iv) for more details), excluded rights or interests are exempted from these deemed disposition rules.

Second, the definition is relevant for subclause 78(1) of the amending Notice of Ways and Means Motion, which allows individuals who emigrated from Canada after 1992 but before October 2, 1996 to elect to have their excluded rights or interests exempted from the deemed disposition rules at departure. For additional information, see the commentary on clause 78.

Third, the definition is relevant for the purpose of the information reporting requirement under new subsection 128.1(9) of the Act, which exempts from the reporting requirement certain properties that fall within the definition "excluded right or interest".

Paragraph (a) of the definition "excluded right or interest" refers to rights of the individual under, or an interest of the individual in a trust governed by, certain plans. The plans referred to in this paragraph include pension plans (including registered pension plans), retirement compensation arrangements, registered retirement savings plans, registered retirement income funds and foreign retirement arrangements (defined in section 6803 of the Regulations to mean certain Individual Retirement Accounts established under the United States Internal Revenue Code). Also included are deferred profit sharing plans, employee profit sharing plans, employee benefit plans (EBPs) (other than those described in paragraph (b) of this definition) and plans under which the individual has a right to receive remuneration for services rendered in the year or a previous year (including, for example, salary deferral arrangements (SDAs), unfunded bonus deferrals, self-funded leaves of absence and phantom stock plans). Registered supplementary unemployment benefit plans and registered education savings plans are also included in this paragraph.

Paragraph (b) of the definition refers to rights of the individual to a benefit under an EBP that would be an SDA if it were not specifically exempted from being an SDA by virtue of paragraphs (j) and (k) of the definition of "salary deferral arrangement" in subsection 248(1) of the Act or by virtue of paragraph 6801(c) of the Regulations. (The former exemption is for deferred salary arrangements for professional athletes, the latter for deferred salary arrangements for National Hockey League on-ice officials.) Only the right that relates to the portion of the benefit that is attributable to services rendered by the individual in Canada is included in "excluded right or interest".

Paragraph (c) of the definition refers to rights of the individual under an agreement referred to in subsection 7(1) or (1.1) of the Act. Those subsections refer to agreements under which employees of a corporation or of a mutual fund trust are granted certain rights to acquire shares of the corporation (or a related corporation) or units of the trust.

Paragraph (d) of the definition refers to rights of the individual to a retiring allowance.

Paragraph (e) of the definition refers to rights of the individual under, or an interest of the individual in, an employee trust, an amateur athlete trust, a cemetery care trust or a trust governed by an eligible funeral arrangement.

Paragraph (f) of the definition refers to rights of the individual to receive payments under an annuity contract or an income-averaging annuity contract.

Paragraph (g) of the definition refers to rights of the individual to benefits under the Canada Pension Plan, the Québec Pension Plan, the Old Age Security Act and the Saskatchewan Pension Plan. It also refers to rights of the individual to benefits under foreign social security arrangements.

Paragraph (h) of the definition refers to rights of the individual to benefits referred to in subparagraphs 56(1)(a)(iii) to (vi) of the Act. Those subparagraphs refer to death benefits, certain employment insurance benefits, certain benefits provided in connection with the Canada-United States Agreement on Automotive Products and prescribed benefits received under government assistance programs.

Paragraph (i) of the definition refers to a right of the individual to a payment out of a NISA ("net income stabilization account") Fund No. 2 under the Farm Income Protection Act.

Paragraph (j) of the definition refers to an interest of the individual in a personal trust resident in Canada, provided the interest was never acquired (by any person) for consideration and did not arise as a consequence of a transfer by the individual that would be a "qualifying disposition" under subsection 107.4(1) if that subsection were read without reference to paragraphs 107.4(1)(h) and (i). See further in this regard, the commentary on new subsections 107.4(1), 108(6) and 108(7) and new paragraph 107.4(3)(h). Each of these provisions is relevant for the purposes of determining the scope of paragraph (j).

Paragraph (k) of the definition refers to an interest of the individual in a non-resident testamentary trust, provided the interest was never acquired (by any person) for consideration.

Paragraph (l) of the definition refers to an interest of the individual in a life insurance policy in Canada (except for that part of the policy in respect of which the individual is deemed by paragraph 138.1(1)(e) of the Act to have an interest in a related segregated fund trust).

Related Provisions: 108(6) — Where terms of trust are varied; 108(7) — Meaning of "acquired for consideration"; 128.1(1)(b)(iv) — No deemed disposition on immigration; 128.1(4)(b)(iii) — No deemed disposition on emigration; 128.1(4)(d.1) — Where share acquired under stock option before emigration; 128.1(10)"reportable property" — No requirement to report most excluded personal property.

"reportable property" of an individual at a particular time means any property other than

(a) money that is legal tender in Canada and deposits of such money;

(b) property that would be an excluded right or interest of the individual if the definition "excluded right or interest" in this subsection were read without reference to paragraphs (c), (j) and (l) of that definition;

Proposed Addition — 129(3.1)

(3.1) Application — Where, in a taxation year that begins after November 12, 1981, a corporation that last became a private corporation on or before that date and that was throughout the year a private corporation, other than a Canadian-controlled private corporation, has included in its income for the year an amount in respect of property that the corporation

(a) disposed of before November 13, 1981,

(b) was obligated to dispose of under the terms of an agreement in writing entered into before November 13, 1981, or

(c) is deemed by subsection 44(2) to have disposed of at any time after November 12, 1981 because of an event referred to in paragraph (b), (c) or (d) of the definition "proceeds of disposition" in section 54 in respect of the disposition that occurred before November 13, 1981, paragraph 3(a) shall apply as if the corporation were a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the year, except that the total of the amounts determined under that paragraph in respect of the corporation for the year shall not exceed the amount that would be so determined if the only income of the corporation for the year were the amount included in respect of the disposition of such property.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 80, will add subsec. 129(3.1), applicable to taxation years that end after June 1995 and before 2003.

Technical Notes: New subsection 129(3.1) revives a transitional rule previously contained in subsection 129(3.2). That transitional rule allowed a private corporation, other than a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC), to include in its refundable dividend tax on hand (RDTOH) for taxation years commencing after November 12, 1981 certain income in respect of property disposed of by it before November 13, 1981. The rule was intended to allow certain private corporations that were not CCPCs to benefit for a transitional period from some aspects of the RDTOH scheme that became, after 1981, limited only to CCPCs.

The RDTOH computation rules were subsequently simplified for taxation years ending after June 1995. As part of this simplification process, subsection 129(3.2) was repealed on the assumption that it had fulfilled its transitional function. It has since been determined that, despite the passage of almost 14 years since the transitional provision was enacted, at least one taxpayer was still using subsection 129(3.2) in 1995. The rule is therefore being revived for taxation years ending after June 1995 and before 2003, in order to give adequate opportunity for this and any other taxpayers who may be relying on the rule to adjust to the 1981 RDTOH provisions.

New subsection 129(3.1) applies to taxation years that end after June 1995 and before 2003.

(3.2) [Repealed]

Proposed Amendment — Restoration of 129(3.2)

Letter from Department of Finance, May 18, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

SUBJECT: Repeal of subsection 129(3.2) of the Income Tax Act

This is in response to your letters dated March 30, 1999 and April 21, 1999 regarding the repeal of subsection 129(3.2) of the Income Tax Act, and the effect of that repeal on [xxx]. As you know, subsection 129(3.2) was a transitional provision that allowed a private corporation, other than a Canadian-controlled private corporation, to include in its refundable dividend tax on hand for taxation years commencing after November 12, 1981 certain income in respect of property disposed of by it before November 13, 1981.

According to the information you have provided, [xxx] has relied on subsection 129(3.2) for calculating income taxes on property income which it has continued to earn under an agreement entered into on February 20, 1974. You have provided a letter showing that Revenue Canada has, until recently, accepted the applicability of subsection 129(3.2) with respect to this income. However, you state that the repeal of the subsection effective for taxation years ending after June 1995 has led Revenue Canada to review [xxx]'s corporate income tax returns for the 1996, 1997 and 1998 taxation years. Your concern is that your client will lose the benefit of the grandfathering that was available to it under subsection 129(3.2) unless the repeal is reversed.

We have reviewed this matter and agree with you that the repeal of subsection 129(3.2) was not intended to effect any substantive change to the law. Rather, it was our understanding at the time that taxpayers were no longer relying on this transitional provision, and hence that the grandfathering was no longer necessary. From our policy point of view, the effect on your client is therefore an unintended result.

I can confirm therefore that we will recommend an amendment to the Income Tax Act to revive subsection 129(3.2), so as to continue the grandfathering that was previously available under that subsection, effective for taxation years ending after June 1995. However, since the subsection was intended only as a transitional rule, it is our view that it should not apply for an indefinite period of time. Accordingly, we believe that it would be appropriate to terminate the effect of the revived subsection for taxation years ending after November 12, 2001, thus allowing corporations such as your client a 20-year transition period to rely on subsection 129(3.2). We shall therefore recommend, for inclusion in the next package of income tax technical amendments, the restoration of the subsection for the period from 1995 to November 12, 2001.

I trust that this addresses the concerns you have raised in your letters. I am forwarding a copy of this letter to Revenue Canada to let them know of our intention to recommend this change.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director

Tax Policy Branch

(6) [The amendment to subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii)] applies to a corporation that was an investment corporation on June 20, 1996 for a taxation year that begins after that day where, at any time after that day and before the end of the year, a newly related person in respect of the corporation

(ii) a partnership that existed on June 20, 1996 distributes, on ceasing to exist, a share of the capital stock of a corporation or an interest in a share to a person who was a member of the partnership throughout the period from June 20, 1996 to the particular time, the share is deemed to have been owned by the beneficiary or member from the later of June 20, 1996 and the time the share was last acquired by the trust or partnership until the particular time; and

(b) where a person who is a beneficiary of a trust or a member of a partnership is deemed by paragraph (b), (c) or (e) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Act to own a share owned by the partnership or trust, the person is deemed to have acquired the share at the later of the time the share was acquired by the trust or partnership and the time the person last became a beneficiary of the trust or a member of the partnership.

(a) the estate of the deceased person is deemed to be a person described in paragraphs (4)(b) and (c) [of the said c. 19 (above)] who is related to each person who, throughout the period that begins at the end of June 20, 1996 and ends at the time of death, was related to the deceased person;

(b) notwithstanding subsection (7), the estate is deemed not to be a newly related person in respect of the corporation;

(c) notwithstanding subsection (11), the acquisition of shares of the corporation's capital stock by the estate from the deceased person is deemed to be a permitted acquisition; and

(d) the estate is deemed not to be a trust for the purposes of subparagraph (9)(a)(i) of this Act and paragraphs (b) and (e) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Income Tax Act.

(11) The definitions in this subsection apply in subsections (4) to (10) [of the said c. 19 (above)] and this subsection.

"permitted acquisition" means an acquisition by a particular person of a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was

(a) held, at each particular time after June 20, 1996 and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, or

(b) issued after June 20, 1996 by the corporation as a stock dividend and held, at each particular time after the time the share was issued and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, by the particular person or by a person who was related to the particular person throughout the period that begins at the end of June 20, 1996 and ends at the particular time if, immediately after the time at which the particular person acquires the share, the total percentage of the issued shares of that class held by the particular person and persons related to the particular person (or in the case of acquisitions before August 14, 1998, by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not deal at arm's length immediately after the acquisition) does not exceed the permitted percentage for the particular person in respect of that class of shares.

"permitted percentage" for a particular person in respect of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation means

(a) in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the end of June 20, 1996 by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not at that time deal at arm's length; and

(b) in any other case, the greater of

(i) the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the end of June 20, 1996 by the particular person and persons related to the particular person, and

(ii) the greatest percentage that is the total percentage of the issued shares of a class of the capital stock of the corporation held at the beginning of August 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related to the particular person.

"related persons" and persons related to each other have, for purposes other than applying the definitions "permitted acquisition" and "permitted percentage" in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the meaning that would be assigned by section 251 of the Act if paragraph 251(2)(a) of the Act were read as follows:

(a) an individual and

(i) the individual's child (as defined in subsection 70(10)) who is under 19 years of age, or

(ii) the individual's spouse;

"specified shareholder" has the meaning assigned by subparagraph 130(3)(a)(vii) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (2).

Subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 155(2) (but subsequently replaced by an amendment by 1999, c. 22 (see above)), applicable to corporations for taxation years that begin after June 20, 1996 except that, by subsec. 155(4) of the said c. 19, where

(a) a corporation was an investment corporation on June 20, 1996,

(b) a particular person would be a specified shareholder of the corporation in the year, within the meaning assigned by subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) if this amendment applied to the corporation for the year, and,

(c) the particular person would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation on June 20, 1996, within the meaning assigned by subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) if this amendment applied to the corporation for the year that includes that day, subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) does not apply to the corporation, with respect to the particular person and persons related to the particular person, except as provided in subsections 155(5) to (8) of the said c. 19. Subpara. 130(3)(a)(vii) formerly read:

(vii) none of its shareholders at any time in the year held more than 25% of the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation, and

(10) The definitions in this subsection apply in subsections (3) [i.e., the application above] to (9) and this subsection.

"mortgage lender" means a particular corporation where the ordinary business of

(a) the particular corporation, or

(b) a corporation (other than a mortgage investment corporation) or partnership affiliated with the particular corporation includes the holding of debts that are secured, whether by mortgage or in any other manner, on houses (as defined in section 2 of the National Housing Act) or on property included within a housing project (as defined in that section).

"newly related persons" means persons who are related to each other and who became so related after January 14, 1998.

"permitted acquisition" means an acquisition by a particular person of a share of a class of the capital stock of a corporation that was

(a) held, at each particular time after January 14, 1998 and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, or

(b) issued after January 14, 1998 by the corporation as a stock dividend and held, at each particular time after the time the share was issued and before the time at which the particular person acquired it, by the particular person or by a person who was related to the particular person throughout the period that began at the beginning of January 15, 1998 and that ends at the particular time if, immediately after the time at which the particular person acquires the share, the percentage of the issued shares of that class held by the particular person and persons related to the particular person (or in the case of acquisitions before August 14, 1998, by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not deal at arm's length immediately after the acquisition) does not exceed the permitted percentage for the particular person in respect of that class of shares.

"permitted percentage" for a particular person in respect of a class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation means

(a) in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the end of January 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons with whom the particular person did not at that time deal at arm's length; and

(b) in any other case, the greater of

(i) the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the end of January 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related at that time to the particular person, and

(ii) the percentage of the issued shares of that class held at the beginning of August 14, 1998 by the particular person and persons related at that time to the particular person.

"related persons" and persons related to each other have, for purposes other than applying the definitions "permitted acquisition" and "permitted percentage" in respect of acquisitions of shares before August 14, 1998, the meaning that would be assigned by section 251 of the Act if paragraph 251(2)(a) of the Act were read as follows:

(a) an individual and

(i) the individual's child (as defined in subsection 70(10)) who is under 19 years of age, or

(ii) the individual's spouse;

"specified shareholder" has the meaning assigned by paragraph 130.1(6)(d) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (1).

Para. 130.1(6)(d) formerly read:

(d) subject to subsections (7) and (8), the number of shareholders of the corporation was not less than twenty and no one shareholder held more than 25% of the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

Subpara. 130.1(6)(f)(i) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 156, deemed to have come into force on June 23, 1993. It formerly read:

(i) debts owing to the corporation that were secured on residential property, as defined in the Residential Mortgage Financing Act, chapter 49 of the Statutes of Canada, 1973-74, whether by mortgages or in any other manner, and

Pre-RSC History: Cl. 130.1(6)(f)(ii)(B) substituted by 1985, c. 45, subsec. 75(2). That clause formerly read:

(B) a credit union within the meaning assigned by subsection 137(6),

"Residential Property": Subsec. 2(1) of the Residential Mortgage Financing Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. R-6, defines "residential property" as follows:

"residential property" means a house or the property included within a housing project.

Subsec. 2(2) defines "house" and "housing project" by reference to the National Housing Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. N-11, s.2 (as amended by c. 25 (4th Supp.), s. 1(2)), which in turn provides:

"house" means a building or movable structure intended for human habitation containing not more than two family housing units, together with the land, if any, on which the building or movable structure is situated;

"housing project" means a project consisting of one or more houses, one or more multiple-family dwellings, housing accommodation of the hostel or dormitory type, one or more condominium units or any combination thereof, together with any public space, recreational facilities, commercial space and other buildings appropriate to the project, but does not include a hotel;

(7) How shareholders counted — In paragraph (6)(d), a trust governed by a registered pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan by which shares of the capital stock of a corporation are held shall be counted as four shareholders of the corporation for the purpose of determining the number of shareholders of the corporation, but as one shareholder for the purpose of determining whether any person is a specified shareholder (as defined for the purpose of that paragraph).

Pre-RSC History: Subsec. 130.1(7) amended by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 53(2), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to para. 130.1(6)(d). It formerly read:

(7) For the purposes of paragraph (6)(d), a trust governed by a registered pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan by which shares of the capital stock of a corporation are held shall be counted as four shareholders of the corporation, and a trust governed by a registered retirement savings plan by which shares of the capital stock of a corporation are held shall be counted as one shareholder of the corporation, but, for the purpose of calculating the limitation on the holding of shares of the capital stock of a mortgage investment corporation by a trust governed by a registered pension plan or deferred profit sharing plan, the trust shall be counted as one shareholder.

(8) First taxation year — For the purposes of subsection (6), a corporation that was incorporated after 1971 shall be deemed to have complied with paragraph (6)(d) throughout the first taxation year of the corporation in which it carried on business if it complied with that paragraph on the last day of that taxation year.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 81, will amend para. 131(8.1)(a) to read as above, applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Section 131 of the Act sets out rules relating to the taxation of mutual fund corporations and their shareholders.

Subsection 131(8.1) of the Act provides that a corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at that time, it is reasonable to conclude that the corporation was established or maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. Two conditions provide exceptions to this rule. Paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is replaced, with effect after October 1, 1996, with new wording that incorporates changes in the definition of "taxable Canadian property" and the relocation of that definition from paragraph 115(1)(b) of the Act to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

(b) in respect of its 1973 taxation year, the total of

(i) 91.25% of that proportion of the amount so determined that the number of days in that portion of the year that is before 1973 is of the number of days in the whole year, and

(ii) 100% of that proportion of the amount so determined that the number of days in that portion of the year that is after 1972 is of the number of days in the whole year.

C is 100/21.75 of the trust's refundable capital gains tax on hand at the end of the year, and

D is the amount determined by the formula

$$(K + L) - (M + N)$$

where

K is the amount of the fair market value at the end of the year of all the issued units of the trust,

L is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the trust, or of any other obligation of the trust to pay an amount, that was outstanding at that time,

History: Subsec. 132(6.1) amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 54, applicable to 1998 et seq. It formerly read:

(6.1) Where a trust becomes a mutual fund trust at any particular time before the 91st day after the end of the calendar year in which its first taxation year began, and the trust so elects in its return of income under this Part for that first year, the trust is deemed to have been a mutual fund trust from the beginning of that first year until the particular time.

(6.2) Retention of status as mutual fund trust — A trust is deemed to be a mutual fund trust throughout a calendar year where

(a) at any time in the year, the trust would, if this section were read without reference to this susection, have ceased to be a mutual fund trust

(i) because the condition described in paragraph 108(2)(a) ceased to be satisfied, or

(ii) because of the application of paragraph 132: (6)(c);

(b) the trust was a mutual fund trust at the beginning of the year; and

(c) the trust would, throughout the portion of the year throughout which it was in existence, have been a mutual fund trust if

(i) in the case where the condition described in paragraph 108(2)(a) was satisfied at any time in the year, that condition were satisfied throughout the year,

(ii) subsection (6) were read without reference to paragraph (c) of that subsection, and

(iii) this section were read without reference to this subsection.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 82(1), will add subsec. 132(6.2), applicable to 1990 et seq.

Technical Notes: New subsection 132(6.2) of the Act is a rule that applies where a mutual fund trust ceases to exist. The taxation year of the mutual fund trust (determined with reference to paragraph 249(1)(b)) is not affected by its termination, unless paragraph 132.2(1)(b) applies. Consequently, the last taxation year of a mutual fund trust under the existing income tax rules is generally the calendar year in which it terminates. This leads to unintended consequences under a number of provisions of the Act (including the capital gains refund measure in subsection 132(1), the exemption from the alternative minimum tax in subparagraph 127.55(f)(ii) and the exemption from Part XII.2 tax in section 210.1) that require that a trust be a mutual fund trust throughout a taxation year.

New subsection 132(6.2) is intended to address these unintended consequences. A trust is deemed to be a mutual fund trust throughout a calendar year where:

- but for new subsection 132(6.2), at any time in the year the trust would have ceased to be a mutual fund trust because of the non-application of paragraph 108(2)(a) (i.e., units cease to be redeemable) or the application of 132(6)(c) (i.e., 150 unitholder requirement no longer satisfied);
- the trust was a mutual fund trust at the beginning of the year; and
- the trust would, throughout the portion of the year throughout which it was in existence, have been a mutual fund trust if
  - — where the condition in paragraph 108(2)(a) was satisfied at the beginning of the year, that condition were satisfied throughout the year, and
  - — paragraph 132(6)(c) and subsection 132(6.2) were not taken into account.

This amendment, which is similar to new subsection 250(6.1), applies to the 1990 and subsequent taxation years.

(7) Idem — Where, at any time, it can reasonably be considered that a trust, having regard to all the circumstances, including the terms and conditions of the units of the trust, was established or is maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons, the trust shall be deemed not to be a mutual fund trust after that time unless

(a) throughout the period beginning on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its creation and ending at that time, all or substantially all of its property consisted of property other than

(i) real property situated in Canada (including any interest therein or option in respect thereof, whether or not the property is in existence), and

(ii) property that would, if

(A) the trust were non-resident,

(B) paragraph 115(1)(b) were read without reference to subparagraphs 115(1)(b)(i) and (ii), and

(C) the property were disposed of,

be taxable Canadian property of the trust; or

(b) it has not issued a unit (other than a unit issued to a person in satisfaction of the person's right under the trust to an amount referred to in paragraph 104(13)(c)) of the trust after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the unit was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

Proposed Amendment — 132(7)(a), (b)

(a) throughout the period that began on the later of February 21, 1990 and the day of its creation and ended at that time, all or substantially all of its property consisted of property other than property that would be taxable Canadian property if the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraph (b) of that definition; or

(b) it has not issued any unit (other than a unit issued to a person as a payment, or in satisfaction of the person's right to enforce payment, of an amount out of the trust's income, determined before the application of subsection 104(6) or out of the trust's capital gains) of the trust after February 20, 1990 and before that time to a person who, after reasonable inquiry, it had reason to believe was non-resident, except where the unit was issued to that person under an agreement in writing entered into before February 21, 1990.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 82(2), will amend paras. 132(7)(a) and (b) to read as above, para. 132(7)(a) applicable after October 1, 1996, and para. 132(7)(b) applicable after February 20, 1990.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 132(7) of the Act, a trust does not qualify as a mutual fund trust in certain cases where it is reasonable to conclude that the trust was established primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. The provision's purpose was to discourage the use of mutual fund trusts as intermediaries through which non-residents could invest in Canadian real estate and other taxable Canadian property without recognizing any gains on the disposition of units in trust. However, transitional relief was intended to be provided in the case of a trust which did not issue units after February 20, 1990 otherwise than as a capitalization of an income distribution.

Subsection 132(7) is amended to change references to Canadian real estate, and to specified other taxable Canadian property in section 115, to references to the same types of property in the new definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1).

Subsection 132(7) is also amended to ensure that the transitional relief operates as described above. The amendment also ensures that this transitional relief is not interrupted by reason only of an issue of units in satisfaction of payments made out of a trust's capital gains.

(c) each fiscal period of the trust that begins in a taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 because of paragraph (a) or that ends in a subsequent taxation year of the trust shall end no later than the end of the year or the subsequent year, as the case may be.

Related Provisions: 132.11(2) — Where trust is member of partnership; 132.11(3) — Where trust is beneficiary of another trust; 132.11(6) — Additional income.

(2) Electing trust's share of partnership income and losses — Where a trust is a member of a partnership a fiscal period of which ends in a calendar year after December 15 of the year and a particular taxation year of the trust ends on December 15 of the year because of subsection (1), each amount otherwise determined under paragraph 96(1)(f) or (g) to be the trust's income or loss for a subsequent taxation year of the trust is deemed to be the trust's income or loss determined under paragraph 96(1)(f) or (g) for the particular year and not for the subsequent year.

(3) Electing trust's income from other trusts — Where a particular trust is a beneficiary under another trust a taxation year of which (in this subsection referred to as the "other year") ends in a calendar year after December 15 of the year and a particular taxation year of the trust ends on December 15 of the year because of subsection (1), each amount determined or designated under subsection 104(13), (19), (21), (22) or (29) for the other year that would otherwise be included, or taken into account, in computing the income of the particular trust for a subsequent taxation year of the trust shall

(4) Amounts paid or payable to beneficiaries — For the purposes of subsections 52(6) and 104(6) and (13) and subsections (5) and (6) and notwithstanding subsection 104(24), each amount that is paid, or that becomes payable, by a trust to a beneficiary after the end of a particular taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of subsection (1) and before the end of that calendar year is deemed to have been paid or to have become payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular taxation year and not at any other time.

Proposed Amendment — 132.11(4)

(4) Amounts paid or payable to beneficiaries — For the purposes of subsections (5) and (6) and subsections 104(6) and (13), notwithstanding subsection 104(24), each amount that is paid, or that becomes payable, by a trust to a beneficiary after the end of a particular taxation year of the trust that ends on December 15 of a calendar year because of subsection (1) and before the end of that calendar year, is deemed to have been paid or to have become payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular year and not at any other time.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 83(1), will amend subsec. 132.11(4) to read as above, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 132.11 of the Act generally allows mutual fund trusts to elect to have taxation years that end on December 15, rather than on December 31.

Subsection 132.11(4) is designed to permit distributions made in the last 16 days of a calendar year in respect of a trust's taxation year ending on December 15 of the calendar year to be treated as if they were made at the end of that taxation year. Subsection 132.11(6) generally permits a trust that has a December 15 taxation year end to distribute additional income to its unitholders, to the extent that this income is reflected by amounts made payable to these unitholders. Both of these subsections are worded so that rights to these distributions are treated as rights to which subsection 52(6) applies, with the result that there is no capital gain on the satisfaction of these rights.

Subsections 132.11(4) and (6) are amended to reflect the repeal of subsection 52(6) and the introduction of paragraphs (g) and (h) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1). As a consequence of these paragraphs, there is no disposition (and, as a consequence no capital gain or loss) that arises on the mere satisfaction of the right to enforce payment from a mutual fund trust.

(5) Special rules where change in status of beneficiary — Where an amount is deemed by subsection (4) to have been paid or to have become payable at the end of December 15 of a calendar year by a trust to a beneficiary who was not a beneficiary under the trust at that time,

(a) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where the beneficiary did not exist at that time, except for the purpose of this paragraph, the first taxation year of the beneficiary is deemed to include the period that begins at that time and ends immediately before the beginning of the first taxation year of the beneficiary;

(b) the beneficiary is deemed to exist throughout the period described in paragraph (a); and

(c) where the beneficiary was not a beneficiary under the trust at that time, the beneficiary is deemed to have been a beneficiary under the trust at that time.

Related Provisions: 132.11(4) — Amounts paid to beneficiary from December 16-31.

(6) Additional income of electing trust — Where a particular amount is designated under this subsection by a trust in its return of income for a particular taxation year that ends on December 15 because of subsection (1) or throughout which the trust was a mutual fund trust and the trust does not designate an amount under subsection 104(13.1) or (13.2) for the particular year,

(a) the particular amount shall be added in computing its income for the particular year;

(b) for the purposes of subsections 104(6) and (13), each portion of the particular amount that is allocated under this paragraph to a beneficiary under the trust in the trust's return of income for the particular year in respect of an amount paid or payable to the beneficiary in the particular year shall be considered to be additional income of the trust for the particular year (determined without reference to subsection 104(6)) that was paid or payable, as the case may be, to the beneficiary at the end of the particular year; and

(c) for the purpose of subsection 52(6), where a portion of the particular amount is allocated to a beneficiary under paragraph (b) in respect of an amount that became payable to the beneficiary in the particular year, the right to the amount so payable shall be considered to be a right to enforce payment by the trust to the beneficiary out of the trust's income (determined without reference to the provisions of this Act) for the particular year.

Proposed Repeal — 132.11(6)(c)

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 83(2), will repeal para. 132.11(6)(c), applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: See under 132.11(4).

Related Provisions: 132.11(4) — Amounts paid to beneficiary from December 16-31; 220(3.21)(b) — Late filing, amendment or revocation of designation or allocation.

(7) Deduction — Subject to subsection (8), the lesser of the amount designated under subsection (6) by a trust for a taxation year and the total of all amounts each of which is allocated by the trust under paragraph (6)(b) in respect of the year shall be deducted in computing the trust's income for the following taxation year.

Related Provisions: 132.11(8) — Anti-avoidance rule.

(8) Anti-avoidance — Subsection (7) does not apply in computing the income of a trust for a taxation year where it is reasonable to consider that the designation under subsection (6) for the preceding taxation year was part of a series of transactions or events that includes a change in the composition of beneficiaries under the trust.

Proposed Amendment — Elimination of NROs

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 28, 2000: Non-Resident-Owned Investment Corporations

(27) That,

(a) a corporation that elected before February 28, 2000 to be taxed as a non-resident-owned investment corporation cease to be such a corporation no later than the end of its last taxation year that begins before 2003, and

(b) no election to be taxed as a non-resident-owned investment corporation be permitted after February 27, 2000.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 28, 2000: Non-Resident-Owned Investment Corporations

Section 133 of the Income Tax Act allows a foreign-owned Canadian corporation to elect to be a "non-resident-owned investment corporation" (NRO). By so doing, income received by the corporation is taxed at the same 25-per-cent rate that would apply to income paid to a non-resident from a Canadian source that is subject to the maximum rate of Part XIII withholding tax. The tax is then refunded when the NRO pays dividends to its foreign parent, at which time withholding tax applies on the dividends. The intended effect of the provision is to place the non-resident shareholder of the NRO in a position similar to that of non-resident investors who hold investments directly.

However, NROs are increasingly being used in ways that erode the Canadian tax base. For example, an NRO may be used to lend money indirectly to an affiliated Canadian corporation. This transaction results in an interest deduction at full rates for the Canadian corporation, while the interest income is subject only to a refundable 25-per-cent tax in the NRO's hands. In addition, this tax planning strategy can allow a double interest deduction for non-resident shareholders, if these shareholders borrow money in order to invest in the NRO.

The budget proposes to repeal the NRO provisions for elections made after February 27, 2000. To allow for an orderly restructuring of their operations, existing NROs will be entitled to retain their status until the end of their last taxation year that begins before 2003. However, existing NROs will not be allowed to issue new shares, other than by way of reorganization, or increase debt levels to finance new investments, subject to grandfathering of arrangements in writing entered into before February 28, 2000.

Proposed Amendment — 136(2)(c)

Letter from Department of Finance, June 11,1999:

Dear [xxx]

This is in response to your letter dated June 4, 1999 to Len Farber respecting paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Income Tax Act and subsection 4900(12) of the Income Tax Regulations. Paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act provides, as part of the definition of "cooperative corporation" in section 136, that at least 90% of a cooperative's shares must be held by members who are individuals, other cooperative corporations or corporations or partnerships that carry on the business of farming. Subsection 4900(12) of the Regulations provides that shares of specified cooperative corporations are qualified investments that may be held in an RRSP. You are concerned that the ability of a cooperative's members to hold their shares in RRSPs could, because the RRSPs may not be "members", cause the corporation to lose its cooperative status under section 136.

You have been advised by officials of the Tax Legislation Division that an amendment to paragraph 136(2)(c) is anticipated which would ensure that a cooperative does not lose its status as a consequence of its members contributing their shares to their RRSPs. You are seeking confirmation in writing of this information.

I can confirm that we intend to recommend that paragraph 136(2)(c) of the Act be amended to enable individual members of a cooperative to contribute their shares to their own RRSPs without any adverse consequences to the cooperative under the Act. The details of the amendment to be recommended remain to be developed. In general terms, however, I would foresee it being structured either as a rule which attributed the shares held by an RRSP to the annuitant, or which reformed paragraph 136(2)(c) to provide that shares contributed to an RRSP by a cooperative member would be treated as shares held by individuals who are members of a cooperative. We will recommend that this amendment apply to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director
Tax Legislation Division
Tax Policy Branch

(5) Deductions not allowed — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act,

(i) interest on borrowed money used to acquire designated insurance property for the year in respect of the business,

Proposed Amendment — 138(5)(b)(i)

(i) interest on borrowed money used to acquire designated insurance property for the year, or to acquire property for which designated insurance property for the year was substituted property, for the period in the year during which the designated insurance property was held by the insurer in respect of the business,

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(1), will amend subpara. 138(5)(b)(i) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 138 of the Act sets out detailed rules relating to the taxation of insurance corporations.

Currently, interest on borrowed money used to acquire designated insurance property for a year may be deducted by an insurer in respect of its insurance business. Interest on borrowed money used to acquire property other than designated insurance property is not deductible. Subparagraph 138(5)(b)(i) is amended to allow interest on borrowed money used to acquire property for which designated insurance property is substituted property to be deducted. As well, the deduction is limited to the interest that relates to the period in the year during which the designated insurance property was held by the insurer.

(ii) interest on amounts payable for designated insurance property for the year in respect of the business,

(iii) interest on deposits received or other amounts held by the insurer that arose in connection with life insurance policies in Canada or with policies insuring Canadian risks, or

(iv) other interest that does not exceed a prescribed amount.

Proposed Repeal — 138(5)(b)(iv)

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(2), will repeal subpara. 138(5)(b)(iv), applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 138(5)(b) of the Act limits the deductibility of interest by resident multinational life insurers and non-resident insurers to those amounts set forth in subparagraphs 138(5)(b)(i) to (iv). Subparagraph 138(5)(b)(iv) was added to the Act to permit a deduction up to a prescribed amount that was to have been set out in regulation 2404 proposed as part of the draft Regulations for insurance companies that were published in September 1997. Changes made to the draft Regulations since their release have eliminated the need for subparagraph 138(5)(b)(iv). Subparagraph 138(5)(b)(iv) is, therefore, repealed.

(11.2) Computation of capital gain on pre-1969 depreciable property — For the purposes of computing the amount of a capital gain from the disposition of any depreciable property acquired by a life insurer before 1969, the capital cost of the property to the insurer shall be its capital cost determined without reference to paragraph 32(1)(a) of An Act to amend the Income Tax Act, chapter 44 of the Statutes of Canada 1968-69, as it read in its application to the 1971 taxation year.

the following rules apply:

(c) the insurer is deemed to have disposed of the property at the beginning of the year for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time and to have reacquired the property immediately after that time at a cost equal to that fair market value,

(d) where paragraph (a) applies, any gain or loss arising from the disposition is deemed not to be a gain or loss from designated insurance property of the insurer in the year, and

(e) where paragraph (b) applies, any gain or loss arising from the disposition is deemed to be a gain or loss from designated insurance property of the insurer in the year.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(3), will amend the portion of subsec. 138(11.3) after para. (b) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(11.3) of the Act provides for a deemed disposition and reacquisition of property owned by a resident multinational life insurer or a non-resident insurer where property either becomes designated insurance property or ceases to be designated insurance property of the insurer. The purpose of the subsection is to ensure that gains and losses from property accruing while property is designated insurance property are included in computing the insurer's income from carrying on an insurance business in Canada.

New paragraphs 138(11.3)(d) and (e) ensure that only gains and losses accruing while property is designated insurance property are included in computing an insurer's income.

(11.5) Transfer of insurance business by non-resident insurer — Where

(a) a non-resident insurer (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor") has, at any time in a taxation year, ceased to carry on all or substantially all of an insurance business carried on by it in Canada in that year,

(b) the transferor has, at that time or within 60 days thereafter, transferred all or substantially all of the property owned by it at that time and used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on that insurance business in Canada in that year (in this subsection referred to as the "transferred property") to a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") that is a qualified related corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 219(8)) of the transferor that, immediately after that time, began to carry on that insurance business in Canada and the consideration for the transfer includes shares of the capital stock of the transferee,

Proposed Amendment — 138(11.5)(b)

(b) the transferor has, at that time or within 60 days after that time, transferred all or substantially all of the property (in this subsection referred to as the "transferred property") that is owned by it at that time and that was designated insurance property in respect of the business for the taxation year that, because of paragraph (h), ended immediately before that time

(i) to a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") that is a qualified related corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 219(8)) of the transferor that began immediately after that time to carry on that insurance business in Canada, and

(ii) for consideration that includes shares of the capital stock of the transferee,

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(4), will amend para. 138(11.5)(b) to read as above, applicable to 1999 et seq. except that, where a taxpayer or a taxpayer's legal representative so elects in writing and files with the Minister of National Revenue before 2002 its election in respect of one or more of paras. 138(11.5)(b), (11.91)(e) or (11.94)(b), each of the subsecs. in respect of which the election was made applies to the taxpayer's 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

Technical Notes: Subsection 138(11.5) of the Act sets out the rules that allow a non-resident insurer to transfer, on a tax-deferred basis, an insurance business carried on in Canada to a qualified related corporation. This provision is elective and, in order to be entitled to elect the rollover treatment, the conditions set out in paragraphs 138(11.5)(a) to (d) must be met. Paragraph 138(11.5)(b) requires that the transferor transfer all or substantially all of the property owned by it that was used or held by it in its insurance business in Canada to a qualified related corporation that commences to carry on that insurance business in Canada. The amendment to paragraph 138(11.5)(b) is consequential on the definition "designated insurance property" being added to subsection 138(12) and requires that the transferor transfer all or substantially all of its designated insurance property for the year to a corporation that is a qualified related corporation that commences to carry on that insurance business in Canada.

This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years except that, where the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative so elects and notifies the Minister in writing before 2002 of the election, amended paragraph 138(11.5)(b) of the Act will apply to the taxpayer's 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

(c) the transferee has, at that time or within 60 days thereafter, assumed or reinsured all or substantially all of the obligations of the transferor that arose in the course of carrying on that insurance business in Canada, and

(d) the transferor and the transferee have jointly elected in prescribed form and in accordance with subsection (11.6),

the following rules apply:

(e) subject to paragraph (k.1), where the fair market value, at that time, of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the transferee or a right to receive any such shares) received or receivable by the transferor for the transferred property does not exceed the total of the cost amounts to the transferor, at that time, of the transferred property, the proceeds of disposition of the transferor and the cost to the transferee of the transferred property shall be deemed to be the cost amount, at that time, to the transferor of the transferred property, and in any other case, the provisions of subsection 85(1) shall be applied in respect of the transfer,

(f) where the provisions of subsection 85(1) are not required to be applied in respect of the transfer, the cost to the transferor of any particular property (other than shares of the capital stock of the transferee or a right to receive any such shares) received or receivable by it as consideration for the transferred property shall be deemed to be the fair market value, at that time, of the particular property,

(g) where the provisions of subsection 85(1) are not required to be applied in respect of the transfer, the cost to the transferor of any shares of the capital stock of the transferee received or receivable by the trans-feror as consideration for the transferred property shall be deemed to be

(i) where the shares are preferred shares of any class of the capital stock of the transferee, the lesser of

(A) the fair market value of those shares immediately after the transfer of the transferred property, and

(B) the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of disposition of the transferor of the transferred property determined under paragraph (e) exceed the fair market value, at that time, of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the transferee or a right to receive any such shares) received or receivable by the transferor for the transferred property,

B is the fair market value, immediately after the transfer of the transferred property, of those preferred shares of that class, and

C is the fair market value, immediately after the transfer of the transferred property, of all preferred shares of the capital stock of the transferee receivable by the transferor as consideration for the transferred property, and

(ii) where the shares are common shares of any class of the capital stock of the transferee, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of disposition of the transferor of the transferred property determined under paragraph (e) exceed the total of the fair market value, at that time, of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the transferee or a right to receive any such shares) received or receivable by the transferor for the transferred property and the cost to the transferor of all preferred shares of the capital stock of the transferee receivable by the transferor as consideration for the transferred property,

B is the fair market value, immediately after the transfer of the transferred property, of those shares of that class, and

C is the fair market value, immediately after the transfer of the transferred property, of all common shares of the capital stock of the transferee receivable by the transferor as consideration for the transferred property,

(h) for the purposes of this Act, the transferor and the transferee shall be deemed to have had taxation years ending immediately before that time and, for the purposes of determining the fiscal periods of the transferor and transferee after that time, they shall be deemed not to have established fiscal periods before that time,

(j.1) for the purpose of determining the income of the transferor and the transferee for their taxation years following their taxation years referred to in paragraph (h), amounts included under paragraphs (4)(b) and 12(1)(e.1) in computing the transferor's income for its taxation year referred to in paragraph (h) in respect of the insurance policies of the business referred to in paragraph (a) are deemed to have been included in computing the income of the transferee, and not of the transferor, for their taxation years referred to in paragraph (h),

(i) the transferor shall be deemed not to have disposed of a transferred property that is a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property), and

(ii) the transferee shall be deemed, in respect of a transferred property that is a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property), to be the same person as, and a continuation of, the transferor, and for the purpose of this paragraph, "mark-to-market property" and "specified debt obligation" have the meanings assigned by subsection 142.2(1),

(k.2) for the purposes of subsections 112(5) to (5.2) and (5.4) and the definition "mark-to-market property" in subsection 142.2(1), the transferee shall be deemed, in respect of the transferred property, to be the same person as, and a continuation of, the transferor,

(l) for the purposes of this subsection and subsections (11.7) and (11.9), the fair market value of consideration received by the transferor from the transferee in respect of the assumption or reinsurance of a particular obligation referred to in paragraph (c) shall be deemed to be the total of the amounts deducted by the transferor as a reserve under subparagraphs (3)(a)(i), (ii) and (iv) and paragraph 20(7)(c) in its taxation year referred to in paragraph (h) in respect of the particular obligation, and

(m) for the purpose of computing the income of the transferor or the transferee for their taxation years following their taxation years referred to in paragraph (h),

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(5), will amend para. 138(11.91)(e) to read as above, applicable to 1999 et seq. except that, where a taxpayer or a taxpayer's legal representative so elects in writing and files with the Minister of National Revenue before 2002 its election in respect of one or more of paras. 138(11.5)(b), (11.91)(e) or (11.94)(b), each of the subsecs. in respect of which the election was made applies to the taxpayer's 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

This amendment is consequential to the addition in subsection 138(12) of the definition "designated insurance property", applicable to the 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years except, that where the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative so elects in writing and the files election with the Minister before 2002, amended paragraph 138(11.91)(e) will apply to the taxpayer's 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

(f) where paragraph (e) applies in respect of depreciable property of the insurer and the cost thereof to the insurer immediately before the commencement of the particular taxation year exceeds the fair market value thereof at that time, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost of the property to the insurer at that time shall be deemed to be the cost thereof to the insurer at that time, and to a corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee") that is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the transferor that, immediately after that time, began to carry on that insurance business in Canada for consideration that includes shares of the capital stock of the transferee,

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the insurer in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing its income for taxation years ending before the commencement of the particular taxation year.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(6), will amend para. 138(11.94)(b) to read as above, applicable to 1999 et seq. except that, where a taxpayer or a taxpayer's legal representative so elects in writing and files with the Minister of National Revenue before 2002 its election in respect of one or more of paras. 138(11.5)(b), (11.91)(e) or (11.94)(b), each of the subsecs. in respect of which the election was made applies to the taxpayer's 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

This provision can apply if the conditions set out in paragraphs 138(11.94)(a) to (d) are met. Paragraph 138(11.94)(b) requires that the transferor transfer all or substantially all of the property owned by it that was used or held by it in its insurance business in Canada to a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation that commences to carry on that insurance business in Canada. Paragraph 138(11.94)(b) is amended to distinguish a multinational life insurer resident in Canada from other resident insurers. In regards to the former, the defined term "designated insurance property" has been substituted for "property used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on that insurance business in Canada". In respect of other resident insurers, the rollover provisions continue to apply in respect of "property used or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on that insurance business in Canada".

This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years except that, where the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister before 2002, amended paragraph 138(11.94)(b) will apply to the taxpayer's 1997 and subsequent taxation years.

(c) the transferee has, at that time or within 60 days thereafter, assumed or reinsured all or substantially all of the obligations of the transferor that arose in the course of carrying on that insurance business in Canada, and

(d) the transferor and the transferee have jointly elected in prescribed form and in accordance with subsection (11.6), paragraphs (11.5)(e) to (m) and subsections (11.7) to (11.9) apply in respect of the transfer.

Proposed Amendment — 138(12)"designated insurance property"

"designated insurance property" for a taxation year of an insurer (other than an insurer resident in Canada that at no time in the year carried on a life insurance business) that, at any time in the year, carried on an insurance business in Canada and in a country other than Canada, means property determined in accordance with prescribed rules except that, in its application to any taxation year, "designated insurance property" for the 1998 or a preceding taxation year means property that was, under this subsection as it read in its application to taxation years that ended in 1996, property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on an insurance business in Canada;

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 85(7), will amend the definition "designated insurance property" in subsec. 138(12) to read as above, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Technical Notes: The definition of the expression "designated insurance property" in subsection 138(12) of the Act currently directs insurers (other than resident non-life insurers) to use prescribed rules for the 1997 and subsequent taxation years to determine the property falling within its meaning. For earlier years, the expression is to take its meaning from the meaning, in those years, that the expression "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada" had. The direction to use the prescribed rules is predicated on the proposed regulations dealing with the taxation of resident multinational life insurers and non-resident insurers that carry on an insurance business in Canada starting to apply in 1997.

The definition is amended to provide that insurers must use the prescribed rules to determine its meaning only for the 1999 and subsequent taxation years. For earlier years, it is to take its meaning from the meaning that the expression "property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada" had for the 1996 taxation year. This amendment is consequential on the application of the proposed regulations being delayed to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years.

Related Provisions: 138(11.31)(b) — Change in use rule for insurance properties does not apply for purposes of this definition; 248(1)"designated insurance property" — Definition applies to entire Act.

History: The definition "designated insurance property" added to subsec. 138(12) by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 39(17), applicable to 1997 et seq.

138.1 (1) Rules relating to segregated funds — In respect of life insurance policies for which all or any portion of an insurer's reserves vary in amount depending on the fair market value of a specified group of properties (in this section referred to as a "segregated fund"), for the purposes of this Part, the following rules apply:

(a) an inter vivos trust (in this section referred to as the "related segregated fund trust") is deemed to be created at the time that is the later of

(i) the day that the segregated fund is created, and

(ii) the day on which the insurer's 1978 taxation year commences,

and to continue in existence throughout the period during which the fund determines any portion of the benefits under those policies that vary in amount depending on the fair market value of the property in the segregated fund (in this section referred to as "segregated fund policies");

(b) property that has been allocated to and that remains a part of the segregated fund, and any income that has accrued on that property is deemed to be the property and income of the related segregated fund trust and not to be the property and income of the insurer;

(c) the insurer is deemed to be

(i) the trustee who has ownership or control of the related segregated fund trust property,

(ii) a resident of Canada in respect of the related segregated fund trust property used or held by it in the course of carrying on the insurer's life insurance business in Canada, and

(iii) a non-resident of Canada in respect of the related segregated fund trust property not used or held by it in the course of carrying on the insurer's life insurance business in Canada;

(d) where at a particular time there is property in the segregated fund that was not funded with premiums paid under a segregated fund policy,

(i) the insurer is deemed to have an interest in the related segregated fund trust that is not in respect of any particular property or source of income, and

(ii) the cost at any time of that interest to the insurer is deemed to be the total of

(A) for property of the trust at that time allocated by the insurer to the segregated fund prior to 1978, the amount that would be its adjusted cost base to the insurer if the interest had been a capital property at all relevant times prior to 1978 and if the rules in this section had been applicable for the taxation years after 1971 and before 1978, and

(B) for property of the trust at that time allocated by the insurer to the segregated fund after 1977, the fair market value of the property at the time it was last allocated to the segregated fund by the insurer;

(e) where at any particular time there is property in the segregated fund that was funded with a portion of the premiums paid before that time under a segregated fund policy,

(i) the respective segregated fund policyholder is deemed to have an interest in the related segregated fund trust that is not in respect of any particular property or source of income,

(ii) the cost of that interest is deemed to be the amount that is the total of

(A) the amount that would be its adjusted cost base to the insurer at December 31, 1977 if the interest had been a capital property at all relevant times prior to 1978 and if the rules in this section (if subsection (3) were read without reference to the expressions "or capital loss" and "or loss") had been applicable for taxation years after 1971 and before 1978, and

(B) the total of amounts each of which is that portion of a premium paid before that time and after the day referred to in subparagraph (a)(ii) under a segregated fund policy that was or is to be used by the insurer to fund property allocated to the segregated fund (other than the portion of the premium that is an acquisition fee), and

(iii) the portion of a premium included in a segregated fund is deemed not to be an amount paid in respect of a premium under the policy;

(f) the income of the related segregated fund trust is deemed for the purposes of subsections 104(6), (13) and (24) to be an amount that has become payable in the year to the beneficiaries under the segregated fund trust and the amount therefor in respect of any particular beneficiary is equal to the amount determined by reference to the terms and conditions of the segregated fund policy;

(g) where at a particular time the fair market value of property transferred by the insurer to the segregated fund results in an increase at that time in the portion of the insurer's reserves for a segregated fund policy held by a policyholder that vary with the fair market value of the segregated fund and a decrease in the portion of its reserves for the policy that do not so vary, the amount of that increase shall,

(i) for the purpose of the determination of H in the definition "adjusted cost basis" in subsection 148(9), be deemed to be proceeds of disposition that the policyholder became entitled to receive at that time,

(ii) for the purpose of computing the adjusted cost base to the policyholder of the policyholder's interest in the related segregated fund trust, be added at that time to the cost to the policyholder of that interest, and

(iii) for the purpose of computing the insurer's income, be deemed to be a payment under the terms and conditions of the policy at that time;

(h) where at a particular time the fair market value of property transferred by the insurer from the segregated fund results in an increase at that time in the portion of the insurer's reserves for a segregated fund policy that do not vary with the fair market value of the segregated fund and a decrease in the portion of its reserves for the policy that so vary, the amount of that increase shall, for the purpose of calculating the insurer's income, be deemed to be a premium received by the insurer at that time;

(i) where at a particular time the policyholder of a segregated fund policy disposes of all or a portion of the policyholder's interest in the related segregated fund trust, that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the acquisition fee with respect to the particular policy exceeds the total of amounts each of which is an amount determined under this paragraph with respect to the particular policy before that time, that

(i) the fair market value of the interest disposed of at that time

is of

(ii) the fair market value of the policyholder's interest in the particular segregated fund trust immediately before that time,

is deemed to be a capital loss of the related segregated fund trust that reduces the policyholder's benefits under the particular policy by that amount for the purposes of subsection (3);

(j) the obligations of an insurer in respect of a benefit that is payable under a segregated fund policy, the amount of which benefit varies with the fair market value of the segregated fund at the time the benefit becomes payable, are deemed to be obligations of the trustee under the related segregated fund trust and not of the insurer and any amount received by the policyholder or that the policyholder became entitled to receive at any particular time in a year in respect of those obligations is deemed to be proceeds from the disposition of an interest in the related segregated fund trust;

(k) a reference to "the terms and conditions of the trust arrangement" in section 104 or subsection 127.2(3) is deemed to include a reference to the terms and conditions of the related segregated fund policy and the trustee is deemed to have designated the amounts referred to in that section in accordance with those terms and conditions; and

(l) where at any time an insurer acquires a share as a first registered holder thereof and allocates the share to a related segregated fund trust, the trust shall be deemed to have acquired the share at that time as the first registered holder thereof for the purpose of computing its share-purchase tax credit and the insurer shall be deemed not to have acquired the share for the purpose of computing its share-purchase tax credit.

(l) where the relevant conversion benefit was a share received by the stakeholder (otherwise than as a taxable conversion benefit),

(i) where the share is, at the time of the payment, capital property held by the stakeholder, the amount of the payment shall, after that time, be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the stakeholder of the share,

(ii) where subparagraph (i) does not apply and the share was capital property disposed of by the stakeholder before that time, the amount of the payment is deemed to be a capital loss of the stakeholder from the disposition of a property for the taxation year of the stakeholder in which the payment is made, and

(iii) in any other case, paragraph (g) shall not apply to the payment.

141. (1) Definitions — In this section, "demutualization" and "holding corporation" have the same meaning as in subsection 139.1(1).

(2) Life insurance corporation deemed to be public corporation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a life insurance corporation that is resident in Canada is deemed to be a public corporation.

(3) Holding corporation deemed to be public corporation — A corporation resident in Canada that is a holding corporation because of its acquisition of shares in connection with the demutualization of a life insurance corporation resident in Canada is deemed to be a public corporation at each time in the specified period of the holding corporation at which the holding corporation would have satisfied conditions prescribed under subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition "public corporation" in subsection 89(1) if the words "shareholders, the dispersal of ownership of its shares and the public trading of its shares" in that subparagraph were read as "shareholders and the dispersal of ownership of its shares".

(5) Exclusion from taxable Canadian property — [To be replaced by amendment below — ed.] For the purpose of subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv), a share of the capital stock of a corporation is deemed to be listed at any time on a stock exchange prescribed for the purpose of that subparagraph where

(a) the corporation is

(i) a life insurance corporation resident in Canada that has demutualized and that, at that time, would have satisfied conditions prescribed under subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition "public corporation" in subsection 89(1) if the words "shareholders, the dispersal of ownership of its shares and the public trading of its shares" in that subparagraph were read as "shareholders and the dispersal of ownership of its shares", or

(ii) a holding corporation that is deemed by subsection (3) to be a public corporation at that time;

(b) no share of the capital stock of the corporation is listed on any stock exchange at that time; and

(c) that time is not later than six months after the time of demutualization of

(i) the corporation, where the corporation is a life insurance corporation, and

(ii) in any other case, the life insurance corporation in respect of which the corporation is a holding corporation.

Proposed Amendment — 141(5)

(5) Exclusion from taxable Canadian property — For the purpose of paragraph (d) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1), a share of the capital stock of a corporation is deemed to be listed at any time on a stock exchange prescribed for the purpose of that definition where

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 86, will amend the opening words of subsec. 141(5) to read as above, applicable after December 15, 1998.

Technical Notes: Under amendments contained in the 1999 budget bill (Bill C-25), new subsection 141(5) of the Act provides for shares issued by a life insurance corporation (or a holding corporation in respect of the life insurance corporation) to be considered, for the purposes of subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) of the Act, as listed on a stock exchange for up to six months after the demutualization of the life insurance corporation. As a consequence, such a share is not treated as taxable Canadian property during that period. This treatment accommodates non-resident shareholders wishing to dispose of such shares without Canadian income tax consequences before the shares become listed on a prescribed stock exchange.

Because of the relocation of the definition "taxable Canadian property" from subsection 115(1) to subsection 248(1) of the Act, existing subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) is effectively being replaced by paragraph (d) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1).

This additional amendment to subsection 141(5) would simply change the reference to subparagraph 115(1)(b)(iv) to a reference to paragraph (d) of the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1). This amendment is intended to apply after December 15, 1998, in order to be consistent with the 1999 budget bill.

(13.2) Maturity after age 69 — For the purpose of subsection (12), where a retirement savings plan accepted for registration before 1997 does not mature by the end of the particular year in which the annuitant under the plan attains 69 years of age,

(a) the plan is deemed to have been amended immediately after the particular year; and

(b) the plan as amended is deemed not to comply with the requirements of this section for its acceptance by the Minister for registration for the purposes of this Act.

Related Provisions: 146(12)(b) — Deregistration and income inclusion as a result of deemed amendments to plan; 146(13.3) — Notification required that plan will be deregistered; 147(10.6) — Parallel rules for DPSPs.

History: Subsecs. 146(13.2) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 41(4), applicable after 1996, except that > (a) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 70 years of age before 1997;

> (b) in applying the subsec. to a retirement savings plan where the annuitant under the plan attained 69 years of age in 1996, the references in that provisions to "69 years of age" shall be read as "70 years of age";
> (c) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan where an annuity contract was issued before March 6, 1996 under, pursuant to or as the plan to provide the retirement income under the plan and, under the terms and conditions of the contract as they read immediately before that day,

(i) the day on which annuity payments are to begin under the plan is fixed and determined and is after the year in which the annuitant attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

(B) 70 years of age, where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996, and

(ii) the amount and timing of each annuity payment are fixed and determined; and

(d) it does not apply to a retirement savings plan that is part of a life insurance policy that was issued before March 6, 1996 and that has a life insurance component that is not a retirement savings plan where, under the terms and conditions of the policy as they read immediately before that day,

(i) the amount of each premium, if any, subsequently payable in respect of the life insurance component of the policy, and a date by which each such premium is to be paid, are fixed and determined,

(ii) the amount payable under the policy because of the death of the annuitant (determined without reference to any amount payable as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a policy dividend or related interest) is fixed and determined, and

(iii) insurance on the life of the annuitant is provided under the policy for a period of time after the year in which the annuitant attains

(A) 69 years of age, where the annuitant had not attained that age before 1997, or

(B) 70 years of age, where the annuitant attained 69 years of age in 1996.

Where, because of (d) above, the subsec. does not apply to a retirement savings plan that is part of a life insurance policy, any part of a premium paid under the policy after March 5, 1996 that was not fixed and determined under the terms and conditions of the policy as they read at the end of that day is deemed, for the purposes of subsecs. 146(5), (5.1) and (8.2), not to have been paid under the policy.

(13.3) Notice — Where a retirement savings plan accepted for registration before 1997 does not prevent maturity after the particular year in which the annuitant under the plan attains 69 years of age, the issuer of the plan shall, before July of the particular year, notify the annuitant in writing that, pursuant to subsections (12) and (13.2), the plan will cease to be a registered retirement savings plan if it does not mature by the end of the particular year, except that no such notification is required where, before that month,

(a) the plan has matured; or

(b) arrangements have been made for the plan to mature, or for the property under the plan to be transferred or otherwise paid out of the plan, by the end of the particular year.

Proposed Amendment — RESPs as trusts

Department of Finance news release, July 20, 1999: Technical Change Announced for Registered Education Savings Plans

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced that he will propose changes to the Income Tax Act to accommodate a common industry practice concerning registered education savings plans (RESPs).

Under the current legislative framework, an RESP must be structured as a contractual arrangement. However, over the years many RESPs have been structured as trust arrangements.

The proposed changes will allow Canadian trust companies to issue RESPs structured as trust arrangements. This will accommodate a long-standing industry practice and recognize that a trust arrangement is an appropriate vehicle in which to allow Canadians to save for their children's education.

The Minister indicated that draft legislation to implement this proposal will be released at the earliest opportunity.

Technical Notes: Subsection 147.2(4) of the Act provides rules that govern the deductibility of employee contributions to registered pension plans (RPPs). Paragraph 147.2(4)(a) allows an individual to deduct contributions made after 1990 to an RPP in respect of years after 1989, to the extent that the contributions are made in accordance with the terms of the plan as registered. This rule applies whether a contribution is made under a money purchase provision or a defined benefit provision, and whether a contribution is a current service contribution or a past service contribution.

Paragraph 147.2(4)(a) is amended to allow an individual to deduct, in addition to the contributions described above, prescribed eligible contributions. Draft subsection 8501(6.2) of the Regulations prescribes, for this purpose, certain employee contributions that are made under a defined benefit provision of an RPP pursuant to an arrangement under which members of the plan make contributions towards an unfunded liability under the plan. For further details, refer to the commentary on draft subsections 8501(6.1) and (6.2) of the Regulations in Appendix D.

(5) Transfer to RPP, RRSP or RRIF for spouse on marriage breakdown — An amount is transferred from a registered pension plan in accordance with this subsection if the amount

(a) is a single amount;

Proposed Amendment — 147.3(5)(a)

(a) is a single amount no portion of which relates to an actuarial surplus;

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 88(1), will amend para. 147.3(5)(a) to read as above, applicable to transfers that occur after November 1999.

Technical Notes: Section 147.3 of the Act provides rules governing the transfer of funds from registered pension plans (RPPs) to registered retirement savings plans (RRSPs), registered retirement income funds (RRIFs) and other RPPs.

Subsection 147.3(5) of the Act permits the direct transfer of a lump sum amount from an RPP to another RPP, an RRSP or a RRIF for the benefit of the spouse or former spouse of a plan member, where the spouse or former spouse is entitled to the amount pursuant to a court order or written agreement relating to a division of property on marriage breakdown.

Paragraph 147.3(5)(a) is amended to deny the transfer of an amount relating to actuarial surplus. This change is consistent with the transfer rules set out in subsections 147.3(4) and (7), which do not permit a plan member's share of an actuarial surplus to be transferred tax-free to another registered plan.

(b) is transferred on behalf of an individual who is a spouse or former spouse of a member of the plan and who is entitled to the amount under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or under a written agreement, relating to a division of property between the member and the individual in settlement of rights arising out of, or on a breakdown of, their marriage; and

(c) is transferred directly to

(i) another registered pension plan for the benefit of the individual,

(ii) a registered retirement savings plan under which the individual is the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)), or

(iii) a registered retirement income fund under which the individual is the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.3(1)).

VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 86(2), applicable to transfers occurring after August 29, 1990 except that in applying the subsec. before 1993, the reference in para. (b) to "marriage" shall be read as a reference to "marriage or other conjugal relationship". Subsec. (5) formerly read:

(5) Transfer to RPP or RRSP for spouse on marriage breakdown — An amount is transferred from a registered pension plan in accordance with this subsection if the amount

(a) is a single amount;

(b) is transferred on behalf of an individual who is a spouse or former spouse of a member of the plan and who is entitled to the amount pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal, or a written agreement, relating to a division of property between the member and the individual in settlement of rights arising out of or on a breakdown of their marriage or other conjugal relationship; and

(c) is transferred directly to

Proposed Addition — 147.3(7.1)

(7.1) Transfer where money purchase plan replaces money purchase plan — An amount is transferred from a registered pension plan (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor plan") in accordance with this subsection if

(a) the amount is a single amount;

(b) the amount is transferred in respect of the surplus (as defined by regulation) under a money purchase provision (in this subsection referred to as the "former provision") of the transferor plan;

(c) the amount is transferred directly to another registered pension plan to be held in connection with a money purchase provision (in this subsection referred to as the "current provision") of the other plan;

(d) the amount is transferred in conjunction with the transfer of amounts from the former provision to the current provision on behalf of all or a significant number of members of the transferor plan whose benefits under the former provision are replaced by benefits under the current provision; and

(e) the transfer is acceptable to the Minister and the Minister has so notified the administrator of the transferor plan in writing.

Regulations: 8500(1)"surplus", 8500(1.1) (meaning of "surplus").

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 88(2), will add subsec. 147.3(7.1), applicable to transfers that occur after 1998.

Technical Notes: New subsection 147.3(7.1) of the Act is introduced to permit surplus to be transferred directly from a money purchase provision of an RPP to a money purchase provision of another RPP, where the second plan replaces all or part of the first plan. Subsection 147.3(7.1) is intended to apply to situations involving the reorganization of a money purchase RPP, such as the splitting of one plan into two or more plans or the transfer of one group of employees from one plan to another. The subsection ensures that money purchase surplus can be transferred directly to a replacement money purchase plan. This will enable an employer to use the surplus, for example, to satisfy its obligations to make contributions under the money purchase provision, to make additional allocations to plan members or to pay plan expenses.

Subsection 147.3(7.1) provides that the term "surplus" has the meaning assigned by the Regulations. Subsection 8500(1) of the Regulations, in conjunction with draft subsection 8500(1.1), defines "surplus" for this purpose. "Surplus" under a money purchase provision of an RPP is the portion of the unallocated amount held under the provision that is not attributable to forfeited amounts, employer contributions that will be allocated to members as part of the regular allocation of contributions, or to certain earnings of the plan. Generally, a money purchase surplus would exist only if actuarial surplus was originally transferred from a defined benefit provision of an RPP and if the actuarial surplus was not credited to the members' accounts under the money purchase provision at the time of the transfer.

The following conditions must be met in order for the subsection to apply with respect to the transfer of money purchase surplus:

- the surplus must be transferred in conjunction with the transfer of amounts on behalf of all or a significant number of members of the transferor plan whose money purchase benefits are being replaced by money purchase benefits under the recipient plan; and
- the transfer must be approved in writing by the Minister of National Revenue.

Appendix D contains consequential amendments to Parts LXXXIII and LXXXV of the Regulations to reflect the introduction of subsection 147.3(7.1).

(8) Transfer where money purchase plan replaces defined benefit plan — An amount is transferred from a registered pension plan (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor plan") in accordance with this subsection if

(a) the amount is a single amount;

(b) the amount consists of all or any portion of the property held in connection with a defined benefit provision of the transferor plan;

(c) the amount is transferred directly to another registered pension plan to be held in connection with a money purchase provision of the other plan and used to satisfy employer obligations to make contributions under the money purchase provision;

Proposed Amendment — 147.3(8)(b), (c)

(b) the amount is transferred in respect of the actuarial surplus under a defined benefit provision of the transferor plan;

(c) the amount is transferred directly to another registered pension plan to be held in connection with a money purchase provision of the other plan;

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 88(3), will amend paras. 147.3(8)(b) and (c) to read as above, applicable to transfers that occur after 1990.

Technical Notes: Subsection 147.3(8) of the Act permits, in certain circumstances, the direct transfer of property from a defined benefit provision of an RPP to a money purchase provision of another RPP. Subsection 147.3(8) is intended to accommodate the transfer of actuarial surplus where a defined benefit RPP is replaced by a money purchase RPP. One of the conditions that must be met in order for the subsection to apply is that the recipient plan must provide that the surplus be used to satisfy the obligation of employers to make contributions under the recipient plan.

Subsection 147.3(8) is amended to eliminate the condition that the surplus be used to satisfy employer contribution obligations. This will permit the surplus to be used for other purposes relating to the operation of the plan, such as to pay plan expenses or to make additional allocations to plan members. In addition, subsection 147.3(8) is amended to clarify that the provision is intended to apply only to accommodate the transfer of actuarial surplus. It should be noted that paragraph 8506(2)(c) of the Regulations prohibits employer contributions to a money purchase provision where there is a surplus under the provision.

(d) the amount is transferred in conjunction with the transfer of amounts from the defined benefit provision to the money purchase provision on behalf of all or a significant number of members of the transferor plan whose benefits under the defined benefit provision are replaced by benefits under the money purchase provision; and

(e) the transfer is acceptable to the Minister and the Minister has so notified the administrator of the transferor plan in writing.

(d) corporations owned by the Crown — a corporation, commission or association all of the shares (except directors' qualifying shares) or of the capital of which was owned by one or more persons each of which is Her Majesty in right of Canada or Her Majesty in right of a province;

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 89(1), will amend para. 149(1)(d) to read as above, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998 except that, where a corporation, commission or association so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is six months after the end of the month in which this Act receives royal assent, the reference to "at any time" in subsec. (1.1) shall be read as a reference to "at any time after November 1999".

Technical Notes: Section 149 of the Act exempts certain taxpayers from tax under Part I of the Act and provides special rules for such taxpayers.

Paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6) of the Act exempt from tax the taxable income of any corporation, commission or association 100% (or in some instances 90%) of the shares or capital of which is owned by the federal government, a provincial government or a municipality in Canada. The exemption also applies to a wholly-owned subsidiary of such a corporation, commission or association. Paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.4) and (d.6) are amended strictly to clarify that the ownership test referred to in those paragraphs can be met through combined ownership. For example, where the federal government and a provincial government each owns 50% of the shares of a corporation, the taxable income of the corporation will be exempt by virtue of paragraph 149(1)(d).

This amendment applies to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998. However, a corporation, commission or association may, through an election in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue within six months after this amendment is assented to, choose that this amendment apply only after November 1999.

(1.1) Exception — Paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) do not apply to a corporation, commission or association during a period in which a person other than Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a municipality in Canada had a right under a contract, in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently to, or to acquire, shares or capital of the corporation, commission or association.

Proposed Amendment — 149(1.1)

(1.1) Exception — Where at any time a person other than Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a municipality in Canada has a right under a contract, in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to, or to acquire, shares or capital of a corporation, commission or association, paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) apply as if the right had been exercised and the shares or capital had been so acquired immediately before that time and held at that time by the person.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 89(5), will amend subsec. 149(1.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998 except that, where a corporation, commission or association so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is six months after the end of the month in which this Act receives royal assent, the reference to "at any time" in the subsec. shall be read as a reference to "at any time after November 1999".

Technical Notes: Subsection 149(1.1) of the Act stipulates that, in order for a corporation, commission or association to benefit from the exemption provided under any of paragraphs 149(1)(d) to (d.6), only the federal government, a province or a municipality in Canada can have the right to acquire shares or capital of the corporation, commission or association. The amendment to subsection 149(1.1) ensures that entities that need only to meet a 90% (rather than a 100%) ownership test would still quality for the exemption under paragraph 149(1)(d.2), (d.3) or (d.5), as the case may be, provided that non-governmental entities do not, collectively, own shares or capital (or rights to such shares or capital) in excess of 10%.

This amendment applies to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998. However, a corporation, commission or association may, through an election in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue within six months after this amendment is assented to, choose that this amendment apply only after November 1999.

History: Subsec. 149(1.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 178(4), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998.

Forms [subsec. 149(1.1)]: RC4107E, Registered charities: education, advocacy and political activities (draft) [guide].

Proposed Addition — 149(1.11)

(1.11) Election — Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of a person's taxable income for a taxation year that begins after 1998 where

(a) paragraph (1)(d) did not apply in respect of the person's taxable income for the person's last taxation year that began before 1999;

(b) paragraph (1)(d.2), (d.3) or (d.4) would, but for this subsection, have applied in respect of the person's taxable income for the person's first taxation year that began after 1998;

(c) there has been no change in the ownership of the shares or capital of the person (other than a change with respect to directors' qualifying shares) since the beginning of the person's first taxation year that began after 1998;

(d) the person has elected in writing in its return of income for its first taxation year that began after 1998 that this subsection apply; and

(e) the person has not notified the Minister in writing before the year that the election has been revoked.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 89(5), will add subsec. (1.11), applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998 except that, where a corporation, commission or association so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is six months after the end of the month in which this Act receives royal assent, the reference to "at any time" in subsec. (1.1) shall be read as a reference to "at any time after November 1999".

Technical Notes: A number of entities which were taxable before 1999 became, as a result of the amendment to paragraph 149(1)(d) of the Act and the addition of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4), exempt under those paragraphs with respect to their post-1998 fiscal periods. This result, which is appropriate from a tax policy standpoint, may not be beneficial for a limited number of entities since it would trigger the application of subsection 149(10) which provides, among other things, that any gain or loss that accrued before the entities become tax-exempt are to be recognized before the change of status. Accordingly, this amendment allows an entity, which has become exempt because of any of paragraphs 149(1)(d.2) to (d.4) but which was taxable for its last taxation year that began before 1999, to elect to retain its taxable status provided there has been no change in the share or capital ownership of the entity since the beginning of the entity's first taxation year that began after 1998.

(1.2) Income test [for municipal corporation] — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(d.5) and (d.6), income of a corporation, commission or association from activities carried on outside the geographical boundaries of a municipality does not include income from activities carried on under an agreement in writing between

(a) the corporation, commission or association, and

(b) a person who is Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a municipality or corporation to which any of paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) applies and that is controlled by Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or by a municipality in Canada

within the geographical boundaries of,

(c) where the person is Her Majesty in right of Canada or a corporation controlled by Her Majesty in right of Canada, Canada,

(d) where the person is Her Majesty in right of a province or a corporation controlled by Her Majesty in right of a province, the province, and

(e) where the person is a municipality in Canada or a corporation controlled by a municipality in Canada, the municipality.

Proposed Amendment — 149(1.2)

(1.2) Income test [for municipal corporation] — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(d.5) and (d.6), income of a corporation, commission or association from activities carried on outside the geographical boundaries of a municipality does not include income from activities carried on

(a) under an agreement in writing between

(i) the corporation, commission or association, and

(ii) a person who is Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or a municipality or corporation to which any of paragraphs (1)(d) to (d.6) applies and that is controlled by Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province or by a municipality in Canada

within the geographical boundaries of,

(iii) where the person is Her Majesty in right of Canada or a corporation controlled by Her Majesty in right of Canada, Canada,

(iv) where the person is Her Majesty in right of a province or a corporation controlled by Her Majesty in right of a province, the province, and

(v) where the person is a municipality in Canada or a corporation controlled by a municipality in Canada, the municipality; or

(b) in a province as

(i) a producer of electrical energy or natural gas, or

(ii) a distributor of electrical energy, heat, natural gas or water, where the activities are regulated under the laws of the province.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 89(6), will amend subsec. 149(1.2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years and fiscal periods that begin after 1998 except that, where a corporation, commission or association so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is six months after the end of the month in which this Act receives royal assent, the reference to "at any time" in subsec. (1.1) shall be read as a reference to "at any time after November 1999".

Technical Notes: Subsection 149(1.2) of the Act excludes, for the purposes of paragraphs 149(1)(d.5) and (d.6), certain income from the determination of whether more than 10% of the income of an entity to which one of those two paragraphs applies is derived from activities carried on outside the geographical boundaries of the municipality or municipalities that own the entity. The amendment ensures that income from activities carried on in a province by an entity, as a producer of electrical energy or natural gas or as a distribution of electrical energy, heat, natural gas or water, is not included in the determination where those activities are regulated under the laws of the province.

Proposed Amendment — 149(10)(c)

(c) for the purposes of applying sections 37, 65 to 66.4, 66.7, 94.1 to 94.3, 111 and 126, subsections 127(5) to (35) and section 127.3 to the corporation, the corporation is deemed to be a new corporation the first taxation year of which began at that time; and

Application: The June 22, 2000 draft legislation, s. 19, will amend para. 149(10)(c) to read as above, applicable to each corporation that, after 2000, becomes or ceases to be exempt from tax on its taxable income under Part I of the Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 149(10) of the Act applies where, at a particular time, a corporation becomes or ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I on its taxable income (otherwise than by reason of the exemption for certain insurers in paragraph 149(1)(t)). A new taxation year is considered to start at the particular time and the corporation's properties are deemed to have been disposed of at fair market value and reacquired at the particular time for the same amount. Paragraph 149(10)(c) provides that the corporation is, for specified purposes in the Act, treated as a new corporation. One of the specified purposes is with regard to the investment tax credit regime set out in subsections 127(5) to (26).

Paragraph 149(10)(c) is amended to make a reference to additional rules for the investment tax credit that are set out in subsections 127(27) to (35). This amendment is strictly consequential on the earlier enactment of these subsections.

Paragraph 149(10)(c) is also amended so that it also applies for the purposes of sections 94.1 to 94.3 (foreign investment entities). For example, a corporation's "deferral amount" (as defined in new subsection 94.2(1)) in respect of any interest it holds in a foreign investment entity is determined without reference to taxation years that occurred before the corporation's change of status. This will typically result in a nil deferral amount for the corporation.

These amendments apply to corporations that, after 2000, become or cease to be exempt from tax on their taxable income under Part I of the Act.

(d) where, immediately before the disposition time, the corporation's cumulative eligible capital in respect of a business exceeds the total of

(i) ¾ of the fair market value of the eligible capital property in respect of the business, and

(ii) the amount otherwise deducted under paragraph 20(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income from the business for the taxation year that ended immediately before that time, the excess shall be deducted under paragraph 20(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income from the business for the taxation year that ended immediately before that time.

(i) the capital cost of the property to the corporation at that time shall be deemed to be the amount that was its capital cost thereof immediately before the disposition, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the corporation in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing its income for taxation years ending before that time; and

(d) notwithstanding section 111, no amount is deductible in computing the corporation's taxable income for a taxation year ending after that time in respect of a non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss for a taxation year ending before that time to the extent that the loss could have been applied to reduce the corporation's taxable income for taxation years ending before that time.
